New Leading Players

With the advent of talking pictures, producers were most desirous of finding players who could deliver dialogue in the best possible manner. Many of the silent screen stars were not adept at reading lines and, before they could learn to do so, players that could were needed. As a result, the legitimate stage was the target of the talent-seeking producers who desired to sign favorite players and were willing to pay large sums for them. Many of those who were not signed went to the coast and found it rather easy—at first—to get into pictures through their stage experience.

When the excitement surrounding the talking picture had died down, and the novelty of hearing people speak from a moving picture screen had worn off, the public demanded that certain thing which had made silent pictures such a great success—actors with screen personality.

Screen personality is vastly different from stage personality. Stars of the stage who have beauty and charm are not always that way on the screen. Screen personality is registered by the camera, and the sharp eye of this mechanical device is the thing that makes or breaks screen stars. If one does not have the personality that photography will bring out, screen success is not forthcoming. Therefore, it was this lack of screen personality that caused many stage actors, great or near great, to return to the footlights.

With the greater portion of stage favorites either decisively in or out of pictures, the producers are searching for new faces to grace the talking screen. This time they are looking for beauty and personality in players as well as the ability to read lines well. They want youth and beauty rather than names and years of experience. As a result, the youthful players, who have not yet reached the point where their names mean dollars at the box-office are being taken in hand by the studios and given parts that will mean either success or failure. Studios figure they can build the names up to box-office magnets providing the players are possessed of screen personality.

In looking over the roster of the various studios one finds there are more new names and faces than ever before.

Among the many newer faces on the screen, individuals who in the past year have come into prominence and are on the threshold of stardom, we find:

Robert Montgomery	Carole Lombard
Sylvia Sidney	Clark Gable
Dorothy Jordan	Marion Marsh
Joel MacCrea	Sidney Fox
Wynne Gibson	Evalyn Knapp
Genevive Tobin	Loretta Young
James Cagney	Kay Francis
Sally Eilers	Jean Harlow
Dorothy Lee	Frances Dee
Phillips Holmes	Pat O'Brien

Elissa Landi

All of these players have been given roles in the past few months which have enabled them to show promise of being of starring caliber. Consequently they have been slated for even better parts and a chance to show whether or not they will reach the pinnacle of picture players. They not only have played one or more roles with distinction, but their work for the most part has been of such a nature that they are practically assured of success.

On the lists of new players who recently have started coming to the front are many names which will, within the coming year, be much more famous. Those being developed at the present time are:

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer:

Dorothy Appleby	William Bakewell
Lillian Bond	Edwina Booth
Janet Currie	Kent Douglass
Phyllis Elgar	Madge Evans
Joan Marsh	Ray Milland
Karen Morley	Monroe Owsley
Irene Purcell	Gus Shy
Lester Vail	Robert Young

At Paramount:

Carman Barnes	Juliette Compton
Robert Coogan	Claire Dodd
Tom Douglas	Tamara Geva
Mitzi Green	Raymond Guion
Miriam Hopkins	Helen Johnson
Lenita Lane	Frances Moffat

Vivienne Osborn	Ginger Rogers
Jackie Searl	Peggy Shannon
Charles Starrett	Pegis Toomey
Dorothy Tree	Allan Vincent

On the Fox lot the following are picked as winners:

John Arledge	Peggy Ross
Mina Gombell	Linda Watkins
Howard Phillips	George E. Stone
Hardie Albright	Frank Albertson
Humphrey Bogart	Donald Dillaway
John Garrick	Warren Hymer
Gaylord Pendleton	Terrance Ray
David Rollins	Virginia Cherrill
Joan Castle	Marguerite Churchill
Joyce Compton	Roxanne Curtis
Dixie Lee	Marion Lessing
Una Merkel	Frances McCoy
Goodee Montgomery	Maureen O'Sullivan
Yvonne Pelletier	Rosalie Roy

Lita Chevret	Claudia Dell
Moel Francis	Roberta Gale
Rochelle Hudson	Arline Judge
Jill Esmond Moore	Ruth Weston
Lawrence Ollivier	Geoffrey Kerr

The Warner Brothers-First National roster has these young players:

Donald Cook	Warren William
Anthony Bushell	Leon Janney
Allan Lane	Ona Munson
Joan Blondell	Edward Morgan
Gladys Ford	Polly Walters
Robert Allen	Mae Madison

United Artists has three new players all of whom are slated for big roles:

Betty Grable	Shirley Grey
Florence Britton

Universal sees big names before the year ends for these:

Rose Hobart	Bette Davis
Arthur Grange	Tala Birell
Darek Fairman	Elliott Nugent

At Columbia:

Constance Cummings	Richard Cromwell
Loretta Sayers	Susan Fleming

RKO Pathe has three new players who show promise:

June MacCloy	Marion Shilling

SILENT PICTURES

Comparatively few silent pictures are being produced by the major companies, and the number from independent producers is steadily dwindling, a survey shows. Among the larger concerns, the silent print is a thing of the past as a real factor in distribution. This fact is more conclusively proved by the generally known rapid increase in the number of sound equipped houses throughout the country.

The companies from whom information was compiled include Warner, First National, Paramount, Radio, Universal, Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Of these, Universal is the single company which makes silent versions of all features produced.

Warner and First National have entirely discontinued the production of silent versions, and report practically none now available.

Fox reports that no silent versions are now being made, and that though there may be a few old silent prints scattered through the various exchanges, it is at best only a negligible number.

Paramount is making a few of the almost obsolete versions, and had available 39 features in all on June 1.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had perhaps the largest list available, totaling 44 pictures of feature length, with the exception of Universal, which makes silent versions of all productions. This compares with a 1930 MGM figure of 78.

Radio Pictures' list contained a total of 15 titles, with no additions since the 1930 report.

Big 4, a leading independent company producing chiefly Westerns, reported no silent prints available, and none being made.

Following are lists of available silent films, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and Radio.

CASTING

Motion picture extras during 1930 earned a total of $2,460,012, an increase of approximately $59,000 over 1929, according to the annual report of the Central Casting Bureau. Since the advent of the Bureau the money earned by extras has constantly increased. The Casting Bureau, since its founding in 1926, has made it possible for extras to earn a total of $12,364,685.32.

During 1930 the Bureau made 252,446 placements for extras. There have been 1,381,215 placements. The average daily placement for 1930 was slightly less than that in 1929, amounting to 807 against 840. This, however, is compensated by the average daily wage which during 1930 was $9.74 as against $9.13 for 1929. Since the establishment of the Bureau in 1926 there has been a steady increase in the average daily wage. In that year extras were paid on the average of $8.46 a day.

The total yearly placement of World war veterans has decreased slowly over a period of four years, primarily due to the absorption of veterans in other more lucrative and more permanent forms of employment. In 1927 there were 23,765 placements of veterans, while in 1930 there were but 12,181 placements. Veterans in 1927 earned $158,499.21, while in 1930 they earned but $83,293.40.

The Central Casting Bureau has been extremely active in finding work for Negroes. This figure shows a consistent increase during the last four years. Negro extras earned $323,937.41 during 1930, there being 8,506 placements.

The cost of placement for adults and children has shown a constant increase over a four year period, jumping from 32 cents to 45 cents in the case of adults and from 55 cents to 75 cents in the case of children.

One of the most enlightening features of the report issued by the Casting Bureau for 1930 pertains to the children. Sixty per cent of all children used, worked three days or less in the year of 1930. There are approximately 1,700 children registered at the Casting Bureau. The total money earned last year by children amounted to $41,650. There were 5,815 placements. The average wage was $7.16, while the average daily placement was nineteen.

The figures reveal that 17,541 extras are registered with the Central Casting Bureau at the present time. Registration gives no guarantee of employment and the figures show that out of these thousands only 833 averaged one day a week or more of work. Of that total number, 803 extras averaged three days a week or less.

Details of earnings and placements of extras are given in the accompanying table:

INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

The independent producer in 1931-32 gives every indication of succeeding in a concentrated effort to regain the position he held before the advent of sound placed him in a state of almost complete inactivity, principally by reason of his inability to meet the great cost involved in the production of talking pictures.

A total of 192 features, 247 short features and eight serials will be made in the independent field by 22 companies, a survey by MOTION PICTURE DAILY shows.

Monogram heads the list with 28 features. In the even dozen division are Artclass, Big 4, and the embryonic producing organization planned by M. H. Hoffman and J. G. Bachmann. One of the interesting developments in the independent end of the business is the rapidly-growing number of organizations which plan to release foreign language talkers in this market. Ufa promises 25 German features and as many shorts. Capital Film Exchange declares it will have 24 in German; First Division three in French, and Judea, six in Yiddish.

In addition to schedules definitely set, there are several new companies which are not yet ready to talk. One for instance, intends to specialize in foreign language pictures and may have a limited group of its own theatres coupled with its distribution. Ufa, too, proposes a chain of 30 houses on an exclusive all-German policy.

Behind the more healthy condition of the independent and his brighter outlook for the new season are several factors. Practically all independent houses of any importance in the country are now equipped with sound apparatus, and the total is increasing daily; independents' banking interests are looking more favorably on their efforts, and responding more substantially than within the past two years; and the condition of the state rights exchanges, following the last two precarious years, is decidedly on the upgrade.

Approximately 30 independent producers will enter the list during the season, including many new units. Among the latter are companies sponsored by:

Harry Asher, Boston.
M. H. Hoffman.
Larry Darmour.
M. D. Sikawitt, organizer of Headline Pictures.

I. J. Kandel, Ideal Pictures.
M. H. Hoffman, Jr., Allied Pictures.
Hollywood Productions.
Charles Hutchinson.
Reed Productions.
Liberty Productions.
Welshay Pictures.

W. Ray Johnston has launched his new Monogram Pictures Corporation.

John R. Freuler, president of Big 4, has outlined his most extensive program to date.

Others who have planned output more pretentious than ever before are:
George Batchellor, Chesterfield.
Nat Levine, Mascot.
Dave Mountain, Richmond.
L. E. Goetz.
Bryan Foy.
Samuel Cummins.
Irving Briskin.
Larry Darmour.
William Alexander.
Congo Pictures.
Al Pollock of Hollywood Productions.

M. J. Weisfeld will produce six feature films and at least 12 shorts under the Talking Picture Epics banner.

Harry Thomas continues with First Division Pictures.

Simple Simon Comedies, producing in New York, will offer a comedy short group, continuing from its initial effort late in 1930.

DISC PRINTS DECREASE

The industry would save half a million dollars a year by elimination of disc versions of feature pictures, according to an estimate.

The figures, from authoritative production sources, are derived on the basis of the usual method of preparing the disc prints of features, which is the re-recording on disc after a film has been completely produced. The cost of recording on the master disc is estimated at about $2,000. Theatre records cost in the neighborhood of $3 per set, and with the addition of express charges and the like on several thousand such records, it is figured the discs, to supply the accounts having only disc equipment, would run to something like $20,000 per film, or $150,000 per year.

A survey of the country's theatres, said Motion Picture Herald on May 9, 1931, has resulted in the following figures:

Total Sound Equipped Theatres	13,500
Disc Equipped Only	5,042
Sound-on-film and Disc Equipped	8,458

The general opinion among both equipment and production men was that the disc was rapidly going out, though a great many of the theatres were equipped with both sound-on-film and disc apparatus, in a combination equipment. One official closely in touch with the equipment situation said there were less than half the number of "disc only" equipped houses there were in the country last year.

In the New York State territory, for example, figures indicated a proportion of about five to one of sound-on-film installations to disc. Only one of every 10 contracts, it was estimated, called for a disc attachment.

All pictures are made in combination by most of the major companies, with the disc equipped houses for which that form is made, noted as only the smaller theatres.

One company official estimated that 2,000 "disc only" accounts in January, 1931, had decreased by May 9 to about 1,500, indicating an average conversion to sound-on-film of 500 in every six months period. He said, however, that, in his opinion, after the final conversion is made, there will still remain some 1,000 to 1,500 small houses which will retain disc until they close their doors for one reason or another.

ADVERTISING FILMS

British National Film is reported to have concluded negotiations in Germany, France, and Belgium for the international screening of advertising films. According to a statement made by British National, advertising films will have the entree to 2,000 theatres in France, 900 in Germany, and a smaller number in Belgium. This company, which claims distribution throughout India and Ceylon, reports that agreements now held will enable it to show advertising films in approximately 6,000 theatres. Estimating an average audience of 500 with two performances a day, this would mean a daily circulation of 6,000,000.

TWO BILLION WATTS

Two billion watts of electric current! Enough to operate 80,000,000 average-sized lights. Or, 10,000,000 homes.

Reduced still farther down the dizzy scale of statistics, this vast annual power consumption of the Radio lot in Hollywood will nightly light a city of 33,300 homes, or of 100,000 population.

A mathematical genius—only a genius could do it—might translate this tremendous equation into terms of bread toasters, washing machines and vacuum cleaners. However, this current has a more romantic usage.

Under the eye of William Johnson, chief electrician, it feeds into the studio six gigantic generators, turns camera motors, projection machines and lights sets. It takes a lot of power to burn a single incandescent lamp—from 500 to 2500 watts—and there have been times when 300 lamps on a single set were insufficient.

Actual power input metered into the studio is actually 2,003,610 kilowatts for the year ending March, 1931—a kilowatt hour corresponds to 1,000 watts of current measured over a period of an hour. The studio's ranch, near Encino, consumes an annual power consumption of 6,730 kilowatts.

Handling this immense power is a man's job. In normal times 150 electricians are employed. At peak times, when production is at its height, 280 operators are engaged. The average for the coming year will be about 220 men.

Distribution

Distribution methods of American companies at home and abroad—A Who's What of distributing companies, home office executives—Lists of companies and personnel, exchanges of both producer-exhibitors and independents, Film Boards of Trade and of non-commercial companies—The Advertising Code of Ethics.

American producer-distributors maintain a direct exchange distribution system, with some few exceptions, in all territories throughout the world. The method of operation is similar to the methods under which exchanges are operated in the domestic territory, with such corrections as may be necessary to meet the market conditions of the individual territories. With one exception, national distributors all operate their own exchanges in the United Kingdom and with three exceptions their own exchange systems in Australia and New Zealand. There are from ten to eighteen distribution points in the United Kingdom and from six to ten Australia.

Several of the companies have 100 per cent direct distribution in foreign territories. Others still market their product through the territorial sales method in the smaller countries.

In spite of the fact that English dialogue materially has reduced the number of pictures suitable for distribution in many of the non-English speaking territories, there has been no curtailment of distribution. By various methods of reconstructing English dialogue pictures and the acquisition of native production, major companies have maintained their status as the leading distributors in all the important foreign language territories.

Due to the fact that local conditions so materially enter into the formulation of policies and operations, the executive direction of foreign distribution is quite different than the highly systemized distribution plan prevailing in the United States. Most of the large companies maintain a major executive in charge of operations in the United Kingdom, another major executive in charge of operations in Europe and a third major executive in charge of operations in Australia. Under these general executives, responsible to the general manager of foreign operations, local resident managers operate the exchanges in each individual territory with considerable latitude because of native conditions.

Due to the necessity of revision of productions to meet native conditions, including censorship, prints are made locally in the major territories of Europe. Australia and South America are the only two large territories which are supplied with positive prints from America. The export negative usually is shipped first to London, then to Berlin, then to Paris and then back to London where it is held for the withdrawal of incidental prints to replace used and worn-out prints in other territories.

Contrary to general impression, major companies do not attempt to distribute their entire product in all of the territories of the world. England, Australia, the Argentine, Brazil and some of the Far Eastern territories consume virtually 100 per cent of the American-made pictures. Particularly in Europe the American producer-distributors select a varying proportion of their yearly product for distribution, shelving pictures which do not fit the psychology of people in the territory or for some other reason are best not distributed.

EXCHANGE OPERATION

The distribution problem in the picture industry is such a complex one that there can be no comparison with any other line of business. The physical handling of the product involves a mass of detail that would stagger the layman familiar only with the activities of a commercial enterprise, whose troubles are practically over when the goods are shipped. That step is the simplest in the operation of an exchange, thus named because it provides a steady change of films for the consumer.

Passing over the work involved in making the sale of a picture or a group, there arises the intricate problem of getting bookings for the pictures set in. The urgent necessity of obtaining quick playdates may conflict with previous bookings by the exhibitor; the result is a condition that requires much valuable time to solve.

The booker also is confronted with the possibility that more day and date bookings may be obtained by the salesmen than there are prints in the office. In such a case he will have to make a substitution, with the consent of the showman, or borrow a print from the nearest branch office. Some companies are attempting to solve this problem by the use of central booking offices, with a master booker keeping records on the prints in a number of exchanges and seeing that each is kept in circulation at all times.

Another element contributing to the difficulties of exchange management is the uncertainty of transportation and the weather. The film must reach the theatre in time, for "the show must go on," therefore it is essential that precautions be taken to see that there are no delays; concomitantly, it is unprofitable to ship it too soon and thus lose another playdate. Often, when circumstances require, airplanes or fast automobiles are chartered to deliver the "show."

The return of a print after its showing entails further labor. Every foot of the celluloid is gone over by inspectors and if it has been damaged repairs must be made. Sometime careless projection injures a print to such an extent that entire sequences must be replaced, and it is shelved until duplicates can be ordered from the laboratories.

Owing to constant changes, no definite figure on the total personnel of exchanges in this country is available, although sales executives agree that it is in excess of 7,500. A typical roster of employees in a major office comprises the following:

- Branch manager.
- Assistant manager.
- Office manager.
- Salesmen.
- Bookers.
- Shipper and assistants.
- Accessory clerk and assistants.
- Cashier and assistants.
- Contract clerks.
- Stenographers.
- Film inspectors.
- Projectionists.
- Film cutters.
- Disc record clerks.
- Typists.
- File clerks.
- Statistical clerks.
- Telephone operator.
- Information clerk.
- Porter.
- Watchman.

In addition to the foregoing, there are division managers, district managers and traveling auditors.

The number of exchanges ranges from 35 down to but a few; the last-named are, of course, those of small companies. These are in key cities and service exhibitors in specified territories.

Distribution costs fluctuate greatly, the average ranging between 30 and 35 per cent.

Sales Percentages

Basic territorial sales percentages which are used by national distributors in the U. S. remain practically unchanged despite the new developments under sound, a survey in February showed.

In the case of state right distribution percentages, and those involving foreign markets, there still prevails the same condition of uncertainty which existed at sound's inception.

Territories of Nat'l Distribs.	1928 Sales Percentages	1931 Sales Percentages

Totals100.00% 100.00%

This table represents the average basic sales split-up of the entire industry. The percentages were compiled by obtaining sales percentage charts from leading national distributors, and from these an average chart was obtained.

The only appreciable changes were in Boston and New York territories, each of which now contribute close to one per cent more gross rentals than in 1928.

The chart, aside from indicating how the various territories contribute to each dollar grossed by national companies, tells to what extent new theatre construction has hit various sectors in the past few years.

Territories which now contribute lower gross rentals than three years ago, include:

Albany, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Memphis, New Haven and Seattle, all of which have dropped less than one-tenth of one per cent.

Denver, Detroit, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and San Francisco, all off less than one-quarter of one per cent.

Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Philadelphia and Washington, which have dropped less than one-half of one per cent.

Territories which now contribute more gross rentals than three years ago, include:

Atlanta, up two-tenths of 1%; Boston, up seven-tenths of 1%; Buffalo, up .01; Charlotte, .03; Denver, .05; Des Moines, .12; Louisville, .58; Milwaukee, .04; New York City, .96; Oklahoma, .07; Omaha, .01; Portland, Ore., .14; and Salt Lake City, which remains unchanged. (Note: Foregoing percentages are all less than one per cent.)

FOREIGN NOTES

A substantial return to healthy business in the motion picture industry in Europe in 1931-32, with the greatest competition in the history of the European film business, applying equally to American sound-film equipment companies, is forecast by George R. Canty, American trade commissioner at Paris, in the light of developments of the past year, as recorded in the annual resume by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Gains in grosses of wired theatres, considerably offset the losses in silent smaller houses, except in Germany, and total receipts were greater than ever before, Canty said. New houses were erected in unprecedented numbers. Film production was infinitely better than silent film standards, with the exception of Germany. In general an optimistic trade feeling was prevalent in Great Britain and France.

In Germany, however, internal difficulties had their effect throughout the German-speaking market. Germany's film-control restrictions precluded the possibility of profitable importation of pictures, and the tariff of the Klanfilm-Tobis combination was so high as to make the entire German production industry suffer, except Ufa, which had a special contract.

Irregularity in method of film financing was another deterrent on the Continent. Most of the larger companies operate with public money, but Canty pointed out a hit or miss policy of borrowing against exorbitant interest rates.

Revival of international agreements for joint bilingual production, was in evidence though such agreements had suffered from unfitness to sound film conditions. Production in four or five languages was a spent policy, but there was a trend toward bilingual on distribution assurances.

Following is Canty's resume in part:

The British film business continued its rapid strides. Product was good, and the films produced were well supported by the public. That phase of the British film act obligating domestic exhibitors to show a certain footage of British film in proportion to the whole was less felt than heretofore. As a result, public confidence in the film business manifested a happy return.

In France the industry worked to capacity; in Germany it was one-sided; and in Italy it was at low ebb because of internal difficulties. In all other countries the situation ranged from indifferent to poor. The highest amount on record was put into European negative cost, and as considerable capital was required also to accomplish studio betterments, cinema construction, and reproducing installations, it was apparent that credit was plentiful. No evidence of a tendency to liberalize existing legislative restrictions, which would, in effect, ease the flow and increase the utility of this new capital investment, was seen.

Except in so far as domestic films were concerned, the distribution curve throughout Europe declined materially. This was essentially due to the general inability of exporting companies to meet foreign demand with their sound films. Innumerable films that otherwise might not ever have entered distribution, and many re-issues were released to meet the needs of unwired houses. Otherwise, the decline would have been greater.

The outstanding happening in the year's activities was the German-American sound-patents conference, the result of which provided for a complete interchange of patent rights and manufacturing and technical information, and the division of the world into three parts for equipment sales.¹ While the conference included certain German and American companies only, it was intended that the arrangements made would be available to all world companies. The conference put an end to European lawsuits filed against certain American companies for alleged patent infringements.

These suits had a retarding effect on the film business in general, and it was seen early that their continuance would cause an irreparable loss.

Film Production

It was previously predicted that the first definite evidence of public approval of the sound film would be the sign for European producers to mobilize their forces for the launching of serious production schedules. This is just what happened during 1930, after very dismal results during the previous year, when the transition period started.

Accurate information of the results of the year under review is not entirely available, inasmuch as complete statistics are not kept regularly in Europe. The situation is made more difficult because in the few leading countries of production, where a reasonable attempt is made to keep statistics, no records have been made of foreign versions of domestically made features. Thus, in France, for example, it is possible which 82 per cent of the European output occurred. The output of the smaller countries was maintained quantitatively, very likely because producers were experimenting with the theory that their products would be acceptable because of national characteristics. These national films suffered in export sales, owing to language barriers. It is questionable whether the smaller countries can continue successfully with their relatively limited production plans.

Wherever total features in the accompanying table were less in 1930 than in 1929, the real situation was worse than the figures indicate, inasmuch as a great many out-of-date or inferior films were released because of the market scarcity of sound films. Otherwise the old films would probably not have been distributed. For the most part they helped exhibitors to fill play dates, but failed to attract the customary remunerative rentals. Incidentally, the number of subjects in the various 1930 totals was obviously less than the figures indicate, since separate count was to determine from the data of the censorship office the number of French films produced locally, but as regards foreign versions that are not required to be censored in the country of origin, the figures had to be based on information received from several unofficial sources. In addition, there are isolated cases where a film which was produced in one country, where no sound studios existed or were available, was sent to another for sound recording, and then entered on the records as having been produced in both countries. There are also many cases where old silent films were sound-scored during 1930 and then entered as part of the production of that year.

The table shows the estimated total number of feature films made during 1930, by countries, together with estimated negative costs involved, as compared with the previous year. In percentage figures the results for 1930, as compared with 1929, show an increase of 45 per cent in the number of films produced and 118 per cent increase in negative costs.

In the compilation of available figures it has been decided that it would be better to count original productions and their foreign versions separately, and also to list as current productions any old silent films that were sound-scored. In France, for instance, 94 domestically made features were censored in France, and 66 foreign versions that were not censored locally were made for export. Therefore, for the purposes of this review, 94 plus 66, or 160 features were turned out during the year.

made of films in their silent, sound, and foreign versions.

New Motion Picture Theatre Construction

A great many small theatres, whose ultimate elimination was foreseen some time ago, were discontinued during 1930, but the seatage loss thereby was probably recompensed by the many theater renovations and enlargements that also occurred. Accurate statistics of these changes have never been kept throughout Europe, but from the point of view of business, the trend is encouraging, for the smaller houses eliminated would probably never have been able to show sound films.

The results for 1930 in the construction of new cinemas show a decidedly upward movement. Not only do these new houses hulk large in number, but most of them appear to have been erected with a view for their future possibilities and were therefore well located. During 1930, 478 houses with 467,568 seats were added in Europe, as compared with 439 cinemas and 383,550 seats during 1929. The 1930 gain over the previous year was, therefore, 39 new houses and 84,018 seats.

As was to be expected, the bulk of the cinema construction took place in Great Britain, Germany, and France, the three principal film markets of Europe. Whatever was done in other countries was courageous, however, since conditions were generally against such investments.

*American current films were practically all off the French market for six months during 1929 because of film quota difficulties.

The year was discouraging for American film sales, and the number of American releases was lower than for many years past.

As a single exception, the British situation was excellent. American business there was unquestionably the best on record. The continued progress in the equipping of cinemas for the reproduction of sound films, the addition of many new theaters, the fact that American dialogue features constituted no problem to the English-speaking public, the absence of new quota difficulties, and the acknowledged success of the British industry itself, which was reflected in greater interest in the motion picture as a form of entertainment—all tended to help American business.

Results in Germany, France, and Italy, however, were disappointing. In Germany a tighter film-control measure adversely affected American possibilities, though this restriction was tempered somewhat by the fact that the American industry found it extremely difficult to meet local demand with German dialogue films from the United States. As a consequence, the number of American films on the German market was lower than for a decade, at least.

In France results were somewhat better. Film business in general was good, although two French companies practically monopolizing theater circuits, severely handicapping American release possibilities, as the French industry was turning out a record number of feature films. One leading American company inaugurated its policy of production in France of multi-lingual versions and met with satisfactory success in view of the multitude of new problems involved.

In Italy the continued enforcement of an official ruling preventing the exhibition of films in foreign dialogue, together with an evident dislike of the calibre of dialogue films in the local language, reduced the situation to its lowest ebb in years. Italian patrons have now had two successive years of indifferent motion-picture entertainment.

In other countries where English, French, or Spanish is either the first or second language, or approximately so, such as Scandinavia, Spain, Rumania, Greece, Turkey, results in view of already described limitations were satisfactory enough. But in other countries, where German is the first or, definitely, the second language (Poland and Czechoslovakia excluded), American film business suffered appreciably. Such countries are the Netherlands, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Bulgaria. American prestige was satisfactorily maintained in Czechoslovakia and Poland, even though German is the second language of these countries, but this was purely because of present national feelings against the use of the German tongue. (In Poland a Government ban exists against the showing of German dialogue films.)

While 1930 may be recorded as the most difficult year since American film distribution in Europe achieved any importance, it is not yet certain, at least in so far as several American companies are concerned, that the crisis has yet been reached. Most American companies regard continental production for foreign-speaking markets with apprehension, because of such factors as recording and distributing costs, where certain foreign sound equipment is concerned, the limited outlet in "wired" cinemas, and local distribution problems that appear at the moment to be almost insurmountable.

It is to be assumed, therefore, that competition for European business will for the coming release season be principally in foreign dialogue films produced in the United States. These will very probably be expensive investments when matched against the revenues that they will bring, but until such time as cinema wirings will have increased sufficiently in number to justify other experiments there appears to be no other alternative if American sound films are to be accepted on the Continent.

Sound Film Studios

The end of 1930 found practically all adequate studios of the silent film days equipped for the production of sound films, and with few exceptions the apparatus installed was of the few leading world manufacturers. The few exceptions involved Petersen and Poulson, British Acoustics, British Talking Pictures, and Selenophon. A few other makes have been installed throughout Europe, but they can hardly be called adequate.

The amazing progress which has been made in equipping European studios is sufficient evidence of the seriousness with which European producers have met sound-film demand. Thus, at the end of 1930, it is estimated that 42 different studios were equipped with sound-film apparatus, as compared with 21 at the corresponding time the year before. This increase is the more remarkable when it is considered that expansion occurred during 1930, not only of some of the studios equipped during 1929, but also of some 1930 additions as well.

Full details as to the exact number of stages, film recorders, disc recorders, and working channels are not available.

From available reports, it appears that the saturation point of sound studios has nearly been reached, and it is expected that but relatively few new studios will be equipped during 1931. France seems likely to have two additions, and Czechoslovakia and Hungary one or two each. However, expansion of some of the existing plants is very likely.

While a substantial increase is revealed over 1929, it should be remembered that that year was the readjustment period when, except in Great Britain, large gains were hardly to be expected. The 1930 gains are significant, however.

Wired Cinemas

An encouraging feature of Europe's effort to keep pace with sound-film demand was the remarkable progress made in the equipping of theatres for reproduction. At the end of 1930, there were approximately 6,720 cinemas thus wired, as compared with 1,670 at the end of the previous year, a gain of 5,050, or 302 per cent. In arriving at this total, it was necessary to include those houses that were outfitted with so-called "hootleg" apparatus, inasmuch as film exchanges felt no hesitancy in supplying them with sound films. While the total in question is not large in terms of similar progress made in the United States, it should be borne in mind that continental Europe is literally dotted with small cinemas that under existing credit conditions could hardly afford to enter into this new field of competition. Suffice it to say that the vast majority of houses seating 500 or more have become sound-film play dates, and a surprising number of houses under this capacity have followed suit. Market supplies of talking films understandable to local patrons having been generally insufficient, owners of silent houses attempted to wait out the situation, hoping either for a return to silent films or for a marked decrease in sales prices of the more adequate equipment. As the situation clearly showed that the silent film, to all intents and purposes, was doomed, and as the market supply of films which could be exhibited in these houses gradually indicated exhaustion, makers of cheaper types of equipment made progress in their sales. This was purely on a price basis, for the general impression continued to prevail that the better makes are worth the price.

European Demand

It is the general trade impression that Europe is definitely committed to the sound film, and that the good sound film offers better entertainment than the good silent feature.

There is little difference in the general European demand for sound films. Tastes being so similar, it is evident that the British and American demand may be alike. Reports from all parts of the Continent, however, indicate a strong desire for films of the silent feature formula, plus the dialogue and sound effects that are understandable and not excessive. Other things being equal, it is reasonably certain that films of this character will find greater appeal in the larger markets, and it is certain that they now constitute the single hope of redeeming lost confidence in the smaller markets. Meanwhile, a mixed demand will continue to prevail, with key cities supporting their sound-equipped theatres and with the provincial "unwired" theatres evidencing some indifference.

Since the sound film first appeared on the continental market the novelty stage has come and to all serious intents gone, during which period the American product maintained its favored position without any difficulty.

During 1930 the continental public was offered a varied assortment of films for approval. Since it is obviously not to be expected that the public understood that these were for the most part makeshift films for exhibition during the transition period only, or until such time as demand could be ascertained and met, it is small wonder that some dissatisfaction resulted. For example, films with the following characteristics were on the market:

- (a) Silent features.
- (b) Sound-synchronized films with music in their original versions.
- (c) Foreign features with dialogue sequences in the native tongue, carried by local artists.
- (d) Foreign dialogue features, with native language subtitles cut in.
- (e) "Special foreign versions" with sound effects and/or songs remaining, but with all dialogue deleted in favor of local language subtitles.

Films of the first two categories were very popular. In the case of the silent features, wired houses would not use them unless they were outstanding successes, which was rare, while unwired houses refused to pay rentals commensurate with previous rates, thus rendering their market value practically nil. It was evident that the market supply of sound-synchronized films was limited and would soon become exhausted.

As regards films in class (c), the competition of domestically made features in the local language was too great in the so-called producing countries. While films of foreign origin (chiefly from the United States) including reputable national artists were in many instances admittedly of excellent technique, they failed to satisfy as national films. For other markets, the cost of these films was unquestionably more than the revenue which they would bring.

Films in class (d) were generally unpopular, although in some countries, notably the Scandinavian, where they vie with the German dialogue films for popularity, they met with what appears to be a temporary success. (Regarding the most popular foreign attractions in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, it is believed by some that the American dialogue films have the better demand, while others feel just as strongly for the German dialogue features. At present it appears that quality films in the original version of either of these languages find equal demand.)

Films in class (e) were not only unpopular, but did much to destroy public confidence in talking films. This situation was particularly noticeable in the small continental markets. All in all, it was increasingly evident throughout 1930 that the continental cinema goers missed their favorite screen artists as well as the old super films.

Changes in Legislation

Contrary to more or less general expectations, the sound film has not nullified continental film restrictions. Rather does it appear that these restrictions may become sharper and assume different trends as the few countries where they exist recognize the problems of foreign trade in sound films.

During 1930 the British film control entered upon the fourth year as prescribed by law.

New regulations of the German restrictions, commonly referred to as the "kontingent," were promulgated for the film season beginning July 1, 1930. These provisions, aiming to meet the new situation, were so severe as virtually to close the German market to all foreign films, so far as possible profits were concerned.

The French contingent, calling for a ratio of seven distribution licenses for imported films to one French feature, was further extended until September 30, 1931, under the option included in an agreement signed between representatives of the organized French and American trades, respectively, with the approval of the French undersecretary of State for Fine Arts, in September, 1929.

The Austrian "kontingent" likewise underwent a change to meet sound film conditions, but amendments had to be made soon afterward to cover discrepancies contained in the first pronouncement. In effect, the situation became more acute to all but importers of German-made films.

The Hungarian regulations were changed from the previous year. While import certificates are still required, these are not based on local production, and consequently the change is slightly for the better for all importers of foreign films.

The Italian restriction continued without change, although there were threats to institute a form of protection whereby domestic production of feature films would become obligatory against the importation of certain numbers of foreign features.

The entertainment tax as applied to cinemas was increased slightly in the city of Riga, Latvia.

A slight reduction took place in the entertainment tax for cinemas in France.

The Danish Government appointed a special committee to investigate the cinema situation with a view to bringing about relief for exhibitors by a reduction in the entertainment tax.

The International Patents Agreement

The international agreement on sound-equipment patents, between the German Tobis and Klangfilm on the one hand, and Electrical Research Products (Inc.) and R. C. A. Phototone (Inc.) on the other, which was made in Paris on July 22, 1930, was probably the most important single outstanding development of the year. The agreement, which resulted in the withdrawal of several court actions, had for its chief aims the exchange of patent rights throughout the world of the German and American companies involved; and the division of the world into three different categories for the sale of sound-film equipment—first "exclusive German territory," second "exclusive American territory," third "neutral territory." Thus, so far as Europe is concerned, "exclusive German territory" means Germany (including the Free City of Danzig, the Saar Basin, and the Territory of Memel), Austria, Hungary, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Yugoslavia, Rumania, and Bulgaria. "Exclusive American territory" means Russia alone, while "neutral territory" means Great Britain, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Spain, Italy, Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Greece, and Turkey.

In regard to manufacture and sale of apparatus, the arrangements made possible to complete interchange of German and American patent rights and manufacturing and technical information to the end that apparatus incorporating the best German and American ideas will be available for installation in all countries.

To offset any prevalent belief that the agreement tended to form a world trust, the conferees carefully announced publicly that the arrangements made are not only available to American and German interests, but are available likewise to the interests of all other nations, the purpose being to provide for the widest possible use of patent rights and technical information controlled by the German and American interests, these interests seeking the world-wide development of the talking-picture industry.

Under the terms agreed upon, films recorded by the American group outside the "exclusive German territory" in the language of the "exclusive German territory" shall be subject to a recording fee and a distribution license fee payable to the German group entering "exclusive German territory." On the other hand, films recorded by the German group outside the "exclusive American territory" in the language of the "exclusive American territory" shall be subject to a recording fee and a distribution license fee payable to the American group upon entering the "exclusive American territory." In either of these two instances, recording and distribution of news reels will be on a freely competitive basis throughout the world, subject, however, to the special minimum recording license that exists in America. The agreement is for 15 years without option.

Following is a resume of the past year's developments in the motion picture industry in Europe, as compiled by C. J. North, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

UNITED KINGDOM

[Trade Commissioner Martin H. Kennedy, London]

The moving picture industry of the United Kingdom enjoyed continuous and uninterrupted growth during 1930, highlights being liquidation of losses incurred in the silent film industry, the formation of new companies and the overhauling of studio equipment. Production and distribution of British made films increased, and many more theatres were wired.

Production:

There were 116 sound feature films produced with 8 German, 8 French and 3 Spanish versions. Nearly all of these were produced by 17 companies in the 12 studios now wired for sound film production. Their average cost was around $75,000. No silent features were made.

Distribution:

The number of films tradeshown was 747, of which 519 were American, 142 British, 49 German, 22 French and 15 from other countries. Of these, 501 were talking pictures, America contributing 400 and the United Kingdom 87.

Exhibition:

There were estimated to be 5,166 theatres in the United Kingdom as of December 31, 1930. Of these 3,151 are wired. Six sound systems account for 2,533 of these, and installations of American equipment total about 1,600. There were 195 new theatres constructed with an additional seating capacity of around 293,000.

FRANCE

[Trade Commissioner George R. Canty, Paris]

The French film industry made unmistakable progress. Production increased 207 per cent over the previous year with negative costs higher by 240 per cent. New theatre construction jumped 280 per cent with a trend toward larger and more adequate theatres, and theatre receipts jumped an average of 50 per cent in wired houses but decreased 25 per cent in unwired houses, leaving, however, a net increase of 25 per cent. Theatre wiring increased by 150 per cent. Unfortunately, American participation in the market was less than in previous years with a consequent falling off in revenues.

Production:

No less than 43 companies produced films in France. A total of 76 sound films were produced with 66 foreign versions, and 18 silents. In addition 162 shorts were made. Ten sound studios were involved.

Distribution:

478 features and 616 shorts were released during the year, as compared with 437 features in 1929. Of these, 237 features and 379 shorts were of American origin as compared with 211 features in 1929. Germany contributed 111 features as against 130 in 1929, and France 94 as compared with 52.

Exhibition:

76 new theatres were built adding a seating capacity of 54,700. This compares with 20 new houses with 20,000 seats in 1929, 420 theatres were wired—163 with American apparatus and 257 with foreign. Including the 1929 figures, this gives a total as of December 31 of 565 theatres in France and North Africa with sound installations. The total of theatres in France and North Africa is about 3,200.

GERMANY

[Assistant Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin]

Sales of American pictures to Germany declined through three main causes. First, the change from silent to sound pictures made more effective control over the German market by the holders of patent rights (Tobis-Klangfilm). Second, the new German film import regulations effective July 1, and running until June 30, 1931, were much more stringent than

Highlights of 1930 in Europe

(From Annual Report of Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce)

Thirty-three millions was spent in making 600 features in European studios, including old silents scored for sound.

6,079 theatres were wired in 1930 as against a total of 1,670 at the end of 1929.

135 features were made in Great Britain as against 40 the year before; 160 in France contrasted with 52 in 1929; only one more in Germany than in 1929, but $4,000,000 more was spent in production.

Cost of production increased over threefold in Great Britain and France.

Exports of American films to Europe increased from 110 million feet in 1929 to 122 million in 1930.

any preceding regulations. Third, the general business depression which cut down theatre attendance.

Production:

Statistics are not entirely clear on this point, but somewhere around 160 films were produced. A large number of companies were involved, 24 companies producing more than one film apiece. Thirteen studios have been equipped for sound.

Distribution:

305 films were distributed, of which 151 were German and 97 from the United States. This is compared with 192 German and 142 American the year before.

Exhibition:

As of December 31, 1930, there were 5,087 theatres in Germany, only nine new theatres being added during the year. Estimates place the number of wired houses at 1930. Due to the patent situation, there are no American installations.

ITALY

[C. Mathews, Clerk to Commercial Attache, Rome]

Italy has not accepted the sound film with the same degree of enthusiasm as other countries. In addition the sale of American pictures was hampered by decrees of the authorities which prohibited foreign dialogue and which imposed a 5 per cent cut in contract prices.

Production:

Three sound films were produced by one studio.

Distribution:

About 160 talking pictures and 190 silents were distributed, estimates placing the American share of the market at about 75 per cent.

Exhibition:

There were 209 theatres wired as of December 31, 1930, with 70 of these using American equipment, and 147 using 16 foreign makes. (The discrepancy between the 209 theatres and 217 equipments is accounted for by the fact that 8 theatres have two sets each.)

About six new theatres were constructed or converted, adding 8,000 new seats.

BELGIUM

[Commercial Attache R. C. Miller, Brussels]

The year was not a good one for theatre owners, as they had to pay high prices for sound films, and houses still using silent films had difficulty in securing product. A large number of new theatres were wired.

Production:

There is one studio which turns out silent films of a patriotic nature. No studios are equipped for sound film production.

Distribution:

About 600 films were released during the year, of which 50 per cent were French and 40 per cent American.

Exhibition:

Five new theatres with 3,500 seats were opened during the year. About 88 theatres were wired, 24 with American apparatus, which, with the 11 wired in 1929, makes a total of 99 theatres as of December 31, 1930.

THE NETHERLANDS

[Commercial Attache Jesse F. Van Wickel, The Hague]

The year was in general a good one for distributors and exhibitors, though there was a slight falling off in theatre attendance. Outstanding developments were the increase in wired theatres and more serious competition from German films through the better understanding of German than English by the Dutch public.

Production:

Production is confined to a few shorts of local interest.

Distribution:

There were 479 films released, with 274 from the United States, 146 from Germany, 20 each from England, France and 19 other countries.

Exhibition:

Eleven new theatres of a combined seating capacity of 7,000 were built or converted. About 100 theatres were wired, bringing the total as of December 31 up to 150. The great majority used locally manufactured equipment.

DENMARK

[Acting Commercial Attache Paul Pearson, Copenhagen]

General:

The year was rather unfavorable to the Danish motion picture trade, due to the fact that the prices of both films and sound equipment were more expensive than the Danish exhibitor could readily afford.

Production:

Four silent films, Pat and Patachon, and one sound film were produced, this latter being made in Norwegian, French and German as well as Danish.

Distribution:

581 feature films were censored, of which 314 were sound and 267 silent. Including shorts, the total number is 1,249, of which 737 were of American origin.

Exhibition:

One new theatre with seating capacity of 900 was built in Copenhagen. About 125 theatres were wired for sound, which, with the 20 wired in 1929, makes a total of 145 theatres sound equipped as of December 31, 1930. Of this total, 28 are equipped with American apparatus.

NORWAY

[Commercial Attache Marguars H. Lund, Oslo]

The general situation was characterized by difficulty in securing silent films for the houses yet unwired. American prestige held up well, but competition from Germany is becoming keener as Norwegians understand German much better than English.

Production:

Two features—both silent—were produced together with a few short subjects.

Distribution:

A total of 733 films, both features and shorts, were censored, 202 were sound films and about 62 per cent of these were of American origin.

Exhibition:

No new theatres were built or converted. Thirty-two theatres were wired, which, with 7 wired in 1929, makes a total of 39 sound equipped theatres. Of these, 13 have American apparatus.

SWEDEN

[Trade Commissioner Basil B. Dabb, Stockholm]

There was a slight increase in admissions to theatres. American prestige has suffered somewhat due to the feeling that American sound films have too much dialogue and too little action. The few American films released with Swedish dialogue, however, have been quite successful.

Production:

Eleven sound features were produced, of which two had German versions and one an English version. Many short subjects were also produced.

Distribution:

Of 3,915,455 meters of films censored in Sweden during 1930, 2,085,939 were from the United States, 858,822 meters were of Swedish origin.

Exhibition:

Eleven theatres were either built or reconstructed, adding a total of 3,500 seats. About 350 theatres were wired in 1930, bringing the total up to 411 as of December 31. 73 of these had American apparatus.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

[Commercial Attache K. L. Rankin, Prague]

Exhibitors had a pretty good year with generally excellent theatre attendance, despite the expenses of installing sound equipment, increased prices for sound films, and the heavy entertainment tax reduced profits. American sound films have decreased somewhat in popularity due to the language obstacle, and German films in spite of nationalistic sentiment are being more widely shown.

Production:

Seven sound features—three of which were made in both German and Czech—and 13 silent films were produced. In addition, four silent films were synchronized, two in Berlin and two in Prague and Czech versions of two American films were also made.

Distribution:

2,079 films of all sorts were censored. 1,064 were from the United States, 504 from Germany, 293 from Czechoslovakia, and France 90.

Exhibition:

About 60 theatres were constructed or converted, adding 26,000 seating capacity. 145 theatres were wired, which, added to the 14 in 1929, gives a total of 159 wired theatres as of December 31, 1930. 51 theatres have apparatus of American manufacture.

ESTONIA

Not more than two features were produced, these being of local interest only. American films suffered somewhat from German competition but nevertheless were maintained at 50 per cent average of showings. Three new motion picture houses were constructed and about 23 were wired, all with foreign apparatus.

LATVIA

[Commercial Attache Lee C. Morse, Riga]

Outstanding features in Latvia were increased theatre wiring, growing competition from German sound pictures, and legislation involving higher theatre taxation, which cut down exhibition profits and them financially weaker than at the close of 1929.

Production:

About 125 short films, mostly of an educational and advertising nature, were produced. They were all silent. There is no sound or feature film production.

Distribution:

A total of 784 films of all sorts were censored. Of these, 354 were German, 296 American and 125 Latvian. Of sound films censored, 82 were American and 63 German.

Exhibition:

One new theatre was built and several were reconstructed. Twenty-six theatres had been wired as of December 31 as against one at the close of the previous year. Of these, 16 have German equipment, a local apparatus and one a French set.

LITHUANIA

[Consul Hugh S. Fullerton, Kovno]

The chief highlights of the year were the growth of the sound picture and the increased German competition due to the better understanding of its language in Lithuania.

Production:

No film production as such. Two or three educational shots were made.

Distribution:

Between 350 and 400 films distributed, about 27 per cent from the United States.

Exhibition:

Two new theatres were built and one was closed. Sixteen theatres out of 75 in the country have been wired as of December 31.

FINLAND

[Trade Commissioner Frederick C. Sommer, Helsingfors]

Attendance at theatres decreased from the previous year and exhibitors' profits have been small. Sound films are popular but better understanding of German than English has created increased competition from German sound films.

Production:

One feature first made as a silent, but then synchronized, was produced. A few short subjects also were made.

Distribution:

610 films were released, of which 392 were from the United States, 111 from Germany, 31 from Finland, 19 from Russia, 18 from Sweden and 39 from other countries.

Exhibition:

There were no new theatres built. 55 theatres were wired, and as 4 were sound equipped in 1929, a total of 59 theatres were wired as of December 31. Only 2 have American apparatus.

POLAND

[Acting Commercial Attache Gilbert Redfern, Warsaw]

1930 was a trying year for exhibitors. Depressed economic conditions cut down theatre attendance, and with the high prices charged for sound films, plus the difficulty of getting suitable material, exhibitors have been lucky to make both ends meet. In spite of this, installation of sound equipment has continued to make headway.

Production:

Seven films—all sound—were produced. There are several small studios, which in addition produced considerable short subject material.

Distribution:

1,647 films of all sorts were released during the first 9½ months of 1930. Of these 1,283 were of American origin and 137 from Germany. 719 sound films (including shorts) were released, 605 from the United States and 42 from Germany.

Exhibition:

Only one new theatre was built, while several were closed. By December 31, 61 houses were wired as against 15 at the close of the previous year. About 35 per cent of these are using American equipment.

SWITZERLAND

[Asst. Trade Commissioner Henry E. Stebbins, Berne]

The sound film has attained considerable popularity as exemplified by a notable increase in theatres wired. As Switzerland is a trilingual country, however, the necessity for versions of American pictures in German, French and Italian is apparent to meet the needs of the market. At present, due to the language factor, German films are actively competing with American product and have attained great popularity.

Production:

One silent feature was made and a number of short subjects.

Distribution:

Estimates indicate the distribution of 250 silents and 120 sound films. Of the former, about 65 per cent and of the latter 55 per cent were American.

Nine new theatres were built with a total seating capacity of about 2,500. Six theatres were closed. About 104 theatres were wired as of December 31, as against 10 at the close of 1929. 41 installations were American.

AUSTRIA

[Assistant Commercial Attache D. E. Spencer, Vienna]

The economic depression in Austria arrested to a certain degree the development of the film trade. Sound films continued to displace silents, but in this American companies are meeting keen competition from Germany. The Austrian contingent law, which was changed as of December 1, had a hampering effect on the American trade.

Production:

Two sound films and 3 silents were produced in two sound equipped studios.

Distribution:

147 sound features and 362 silents were distributed. Of these 85 sound features and 151 silents were supplied by Germany, and 53 sound features and 168 silents by the United States.

Exhibition:

Thirty theatres were remodeled and none built. Total wired theatres as of December 31 is 153, of which 29 have American equipment.

HUNGARY

[Assistant Trade Commissioner Walter M. Slavik, Budapest]

The general film situation was critical owing to lack of theatre attendance, and increased charges for sound films. American films are beginning to feel German competition, as many more Hungarians understand German than English.

Production:

Three sound features were produced, one with a Rumanian version.

Distribution:

A total of 323 features were censored for release, these consisting of 199 sound and 124 silent films, 132 of the former and 72 of the latter came from the United States.

Exhibition:

Theatres built and reconstructed reached a total of 5 with 1,806 seats, but a number of theatres were closed. Ten theatres had been wired in Hungary during 1929, and 108 additional were wired in 1930, making a total of 118 wired as of December 31.

SPAIN

From figures at hand it is believed that 10 feature films were produced. So far as distribution is concerned films from the United States held their own very well averaging around 75 per cent of all those distributed. New theatres constructed amounted to 48 seating an additional 51,500 persons and 153 theatres had sound equipment installed, which with the 15 wired at the end of 1929 gives a total of

PORTUGAL

[Commercial Attache Richard C. Long, Lisbon]

American prestige held up well, but the public is tiring of films with foreign dialogue. Exhibitors object to the cost of sound films and equipment.

Production:

One sound film (not yet complete) and four silents were produced, also a few shorts.

Distribution:

350 features were released, of which 60 were sound. American films numbered 260 silents and 49 sound, as against 50 German silents and 3 German sound films.

Exhibition:

Four theatres adding 2,800 seats were built or reconstructed. Nine theatres were wired, six with American equipment. Together with six wired in 1929, this makes a total of 15.

YUGOSLAVIA

[Commercial Attache Emi Kekich, Belgrade]

General:

The most interesting development was the increased demand for German pictures, which it is estimated cut into American business by about 20 per cent. The reason for this is the language factor. Increased prices for sound films have cut into exhibition profits, but they had a generally satisfactory year.

Production:

One silent feature was made, but production in general is at a minimum.

Distribution:

242 features were released, of which 134 came from the United States and 72 from Germany. The United States also supplied 260 shorts as against 54 from Germany.

Exhibition:

Two new theatres were built or reconstructed, adding 1,500 seats. 68 theatres were wired during 1930, of which 18 equipments were American. As only one theatre was wired in 1929, the total wired as of December 31, is 69.

GREECE

[Acting Commercial Attache Ralph B. Curren, Athens]

General:

General conditions in the film trade have not been very satisfactory. Economic depression and heavy taxation have cut down exhibition profits. American prestige held up as well as can be expected and sound films were well attended, even with the limited knowledge of English on the part of Greek audiences.

Production:

Seven silent features were produced, of which one had a considerable local success. Production is as yet relatively undeveloped.

Distribution:

Between October 1, 1929, and September 20, 1930, a total of 264 films was released. Of these, 194 were of American origin. Of the total, 126 were features, the number of American being 72, of which 37 were silent and 35 sound.

Exhibition:

One theatre was built and two were reconstructed, adding about 2,800 seats. Thirty theatres were wired in 1930, which, with the 1929 figures, makes the total 36 as of December 31.

BULGARIA

[Vice Consul Thomas F. Sherman, Sofia]

Despite the economic depression, business was generally better than in 1929. Sound films are popular and American prestige was increased though there is strong competition from German sources.

Production:

Four silents of a primitive type.

Distribution:

Nearly 900 films of all sorts were released. Official statistics are not available, but it is believed German films were in the majority with films from the United States next.

No new theatres were constructed or converted. Of a total of about 135 theatres, 22 were wired as of December 31.

RUMANIA

[Commercial Attache Sprouh Fouche, Bucharest]

General:

The general film situation was less satisfactory than in 1929 for two reasons. First, the economic depression cut down theatre attendance and second the increased prices of sound films absorbed existing profits. Increased competition is being felt from both French and German sources.

Production:

Only a few shorts were produced.

Distribution:

About 300 films were released—125 silent and 175 sound. About 80 per cent of the silent and 60 per cent of the sound films were of American origin.

Exhibition:

Five new theatres were built and 20 were reconstructed, making an added seating capacity of about 7,000 seats. 86 theatres were wired in 1930, which, with those wired in 1929, makes a total of 89 as of December 31. American equipments number 15.

TURKEY

[Commercial Attache Julian E. Gillespie, Istanbul]

General:

Exhibitors reported better business by about 20 per cent from the period September 15 to December 31 over the previous year. This is accounted for largely by new theatre wirings, which gave a wider market. American prestige suffered, however, on account of the language barrier as the number of English speaking people in Turkey is much smaller than those understanding French or German. Thus, French and German films have made considerable gains.

No features were produced.

Distribution:

143 features were exhibited—98 sound and 45 silent. About 50 per cent of the sound and 80 per cent of the silents were of American origin.

Exhibition:

Three theatres were built and one reconstructed adding about 2,500 seats. As of December 31, 23 theatres were wired (21 in 1930 and two in 1929). Nine of these had American apparatus.

QUOTAS

Most severe of the quota regulations in force in the principal countries of the world are those existing in Germany, birthplace of the quota as a protection against American product. The German law, shifted from time to time, has been, and continues to be, always in a direction more inimical to American films.

In England, where a 10-year regulation is in force, the law is strict and more serious for American interests than in other countries, because, naturally, the English speaking countries form the most adaptable market for American pictures since the advent of talkers. In others, language itself forms a strong barrier.

The regulations in France, Italy and the smaller countries are continually shifting, and up to now, have not generally been taken too seriously.

Following is a summarization of existing regulations in each of the major countries of the world, as of June 1, 1931.

England

On April 1, 1931, the percentage of British films on distributors became 12½%; the quota on exhibitors remains 7½% until October 1, 1931, when it becomes 10%. This law, the Cinematograph Films Act, became first effective January 1, 1928, and remains in force for ten years. The quota percentage on exhibitors and distributors increases periodically by 2½% until it reaches 20% on both.

France

The French contingent regulations, effective March 1, 1928, provide seven import certificates for each film of the first category (a film of which the author, technical director, director, his assistants and the cameramen must all be French; the sets must have been made exclusively in studios belonging to French companies and on French territory; the principal roles may include foreign actors to the extent that these actors do not exceed 25%, although the right to a foreign actor is recognized even if the number is not divisible by four, etc.) produced in France, plus two certificates for films exported for foreign exploitation. Importers are entitled to import free of contingent regulation 60% of the number of films imported into France by them in 1927. On September 19, 1929, by agreement between the French Government and the representative of the American industry, these conditions were to remain effective until October 1, 1931.

Germany

The new German contingent regulations effective between July 1, 1931, and June 30, 1932, provide for the insurance of 105 permits for sound feature films and 70 permits for silent feature films with 20 additional permits in the discretion of the Minister of the Interior, to be issued, probably, for sound pictures. The proportion of the total number of permits allotted to any given company depends on the proportion of the German film supply that it has distributed during the preceding calendar year.

Hungary

On July 1, 1930, the Prime Minister of Hungary issued a decree which, when made effective by the Hungarian Ministers of Commerce and Interior, provided for the abolition of the contingent system of 20 licenses for each Hungarian film of feature length and specifying a fixed charge of 1,000 pengos for import certificates for sound films of more than 1,500 meters and 200 pengos for certificates for short sound films less than 400 meters in length. In addition to the 20 filler and 7 filler charges now in force, there will be charged a supplementary fee of 20 fillers per meters and 200 pengos for certificates for short sound films. Silent films are exempted from supplying an import certificate while newsreels, cultural educational and scientific films are exempt from all charges except the import duty of $50 per 220 pounds.

Austria

Effective April 7, 1931, the Austrian film regulations were modified to the extent that to obtain import permits for sound feature films which, to be understood by the general public require the insertion of text and titles, 1½ bonus certificates are required for 2 prints thereof; 2½ certificates for 3 prints; and 3 certificates for 4 prints. The former regulations provided for 3 contingents for each sound film of feature length. No contingents are required for silent features.

Italy

As of October 1, 1927, regulations in Italy provided for the reservation on the total days of showing of not less than the tenth part for the projection of national films. From this total of days the period from July 1 to September 30 is excluded.

New Zealand

By the Cinematographic Films Act, 1928, which became effective January 1, 1929, New Zealand instituted a quota act similar to that of England, by the terms of which the distributors percentage of British or New Zealand films became 10% on January 1, 1931, and the exhibitors percentage became 7½% for the year ending September 30, 1931. As in England, these quota percentages advance periodically by 2½% until a maximum of 20% is reached.

State of Victoria (Australia)

On July 1, 1927, the provision of the Victoria censorship law requiring the showing in each program of 1,000 feet of Australian made pictures and the same quantity of British made pictures, went into effect.

Province of Ontario (Canada)

About April 1, 1931, the Theatres and Cinematographs Act of the Province of Ontario was amended to enable the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations requiring that a portion of the films available for distribution to exhibitors and the films exhibited in each theatre shall be of British manufacture and origin and fixing such proportions on a monthly or yearly basis. The Ontario Government now has power to make quota regulations without further legislation.

Rumania

In March, 1931, regulations were issued in Rumania compelling the inclusion of 1,000 ft. of educational film in all movie performances.

Motion Picture Equipment Exports for the First Six Months of 1930

Preliminary exports figures for the first six months of 1930, says N. D. Golden, Assistant Chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, show that 1,218 standard size 35 millimeter motion picture projectors valued at $313,116 were sold abroad as against 702 projectors with a value of $178,591 during the first six months of 1929. However, a decrease is noted in our projector exports of the 16 millimeter type. During the first six months of this year 715 projectors of the portable or amateur type valued at $69,610 were exported as against 946 projectors of 16 millimeter type valued at $92,589 in 1929.

The following table shows our exports of 35 and 16 millimeter projectors to the various geographical sections of the world for the first six months of 1929 and 1930.

Exports of motion picture cameras of the 35 millimeter type for the first six months of 1930 also show a slight increase. During this period 430 cameras valued at $194,608 were exported as against 419 cameras valued at $142,847 for the first six months of 1929. Exports of the 16 millimeter camera have decreased almost fifty per cent for the first half of 1930. During this period 761 cameras of 16 millimeter type, valued at $91,519 were exported as compared with 1,383 cameras valued at $136,176 during the same period of 1929.

The following table shows our exports of 35 and 16 millimeter cameras to the geographical sections of the world for the first six months of 1929 and 1930.

Due to the absence of export figures of sound equipment during 1928 comparative figures are not available. It might also be mentioned that only values of such equipment are available inasmuch as exporters of sound equipment do not always send the complete sound reproducing unit as a single shipment.

The following tables show the value of our exports in sound motion picture apparatus to the geographical sections of the world and also the ten leading individual markets.

Preliminary figures of American motion picture exports for the first nine months of 1930 show an increase of 8,900,540 feet and a value increase of $719,212 over exports for the corresponding period in 1929, says C. J. North, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The United States shipped to all markets of the world during the 1930 period 210,037,969 linear feet of motion pictures with a declared value of $6,168,703 as compared with 201,137,429 linear feet valued at $5,449,491 for the corresponding period in 1929. This 1930 total incidentally is the largest since the Motion Picture Division began to make compilations on the subject back in 1925.

The largest increase was in exports of positive motion pictures which amounted to 201,320,492 linear feet valued at $5,166,805 in the first nine months of 1930 as against 195,018,280 linear feet valued at $4,610,723 for the same period in 1929. Exposed negative film also shows an increase, the figures for the 1930 period being 8,717,477 feet with a declared value of $1,001,898 as against 6,119,149 feet valued at $838,768 for the 1929 period. It is interesting to note that of the motion picture films exported from the United States during the first nine months of 1930, 5,208,810 feet of negatives and 132,239,581 feet of positives were sound synchronized. As 1930 is the first calendar year in which sound films received a separate classification from silent films in our export statistics, no comparison in this regard can be made with the 1929 period. Distribution of American Pictures

Since the introduction of the sound and dialogue film Europe has become by far our largest quantity market at the same time maintaining its position as our best source of revenue. For the first nine months of 1930 American exports of motion pictures to this region reached the unprecedented total of 93,537,822 feet or not far below half of our total film exports. This figure furthermore shows an increase of nearly 20,000,000 feet more than for the 1929 period which in turn topped 1928 by nearly 25,000,000 feet. As a matter of fact, Europe accounts for something more than our total gain in film exports, for both Latin America and the Far East showed declines from 1929. The former, which was our largest quantity market as recently as 1928, fell about 850,000 feet below its 1929 figure, while the Far East totals declined just over 8,000,000 feet. This latter was due almost entirely to the falling off in film exports to Australia. Of other regions Canada showed a gain of nearly 2,000,000 feet and South Africa an almost equivalent loss.

The accompanying table gives in detail the quantity and value of film exports to the various regional divisions of the world.

Distribution by Countries—Europe—Latin America

The United Kingdom remains by far our leading individual film market, showing an increase of nearly 10,000,000 feet over its record 1929 figures. France, which stood ninth in the 1928 period and seventh in 1929, went to second place in 1930 both in Europe and in the world. Her total of 17,318,513 linear feet is well over double her film importations from the United States during the first nine months of 1929. Germany, our third largest market in Europe, has declined from fifth to sixth place as a world market even though our exports of films to Germany for the 1930 period were nearly 1,000,000 feet greater than in the 1929 period. Spain appears as our fourth largest European market and the ninth in the world. This is the first time this country has been in the first ten of our world markets.

The three countries in Latin America which almost invariably appear among our ten leading film markets are (in that order)—Argentina, Brazil and Mexico. This year is no exception to the rule, but Argentina has dropped from third to fourth though there is declined nearly 6,000,000 feet. The only other Far Eastern country which stands among the first ten markets for American films is India which as for the same period last year holds tenth position. Curiously enough just 2,344 feet less of film was exported to this market for the first nine months of 1930 than in the first nine months of 1929.

Exports by Countries

The accompanying table gives details of United States film exports to the leading individual markets of the world.

American Imports of Motion Pictures

For the first nine months of 1930 American imports of negatives amounted to 1,746,114 linear feet with a declared value of $221,932 as against 1,926,749 feet valued at $243,254 for the same period in 1929. For these periods the imports of positives were respectively 3,407,355 feet valued at $163,563 as compared with 3,764,797 feet valued at $130,729. In the case both of negatives and positives the total imported during the first nine months of 1930 was less than during the first nine months of 1929.

United States Exports of Films to Individual Leading Markets

Countries of Destination	Rank	First 9 Months of 1929		Rank	First 9 Months of 1930
		Linear Feet	Value		Linear Feet	Value
United Kingdom	1	23,111,066	$1,049,760	1	33,038,668	$1,708,843
France	7	8,022,510	199,863	2	17,318,513	429,703
Australia	2	21,133,317	485,652	3	15,538,612	393,303
Argentina	3	14,829,125	368,344	4	12,640,569	344,935
Canada	6	10,609,548	462,734	5	12,534,397	501,469
Germany	5	11,532,705	354,501	6	12,083,870	321,075

India	10	5,031,522	124,194	10	5,029,178	128,490

only a very slight decrease in our film exports to Argentina. Brazil has dropped from fourth to seventh, while Mexico remains eighth. Exports of films to Brazil declined over 2,000,000 feet while similar exports to Mexico showed an increase of a little under 1,000,000 feet.

The Far East

Australia, which led the world as a quantity market for American films from 1925 through 1928, continued the decline which set in for the nine months' period of 1929, but nevertheless went up from fourth to third place in the markets of the world. The film footage sent to Australia, however,

American Foreign Trade in Non-Exposed Film

During the first nine months of 1930 American exports of films sensitized but not exposed reached a total of 60,098,922 linear feet valued at $1,341,543 as compared with 44,965,833 feet valued at $980,202 for the first nine months of 1929. Coincident with this gain there was a tremendous decline in the amount of non-exposed film imported. Whereas for the 1929 period the amount reached a total of 273,357 feet valued at $3,472,079 in the 1930 period this fell off to 103,095,089 with a value of $933,444.

DISTRIBUTOR DRAFT OF PROPOSED CONTRACT

Final text of distributors' proposed standard licensing agreement, completed by them following the Atlantic City meetings of the "5-5-5" conference, held early in July, at which proposed changes in the agreement were drafted by distributors, the M. P. T. O. A. and Allied States Association.

There are two forms to the proposed agreement, a "long" and "short." The former, appearing below, is immediately followed by the "short" agreement.

Agreement of license under copyright of the motion pictures distributed by the distributor for exhibition at the theatre of the exhibitor respectively named and specified in a Short Form License Agreement (hereinafter referred to as the Short Form) containing the Schedule hereinafter referred to, and in which Short Form by reference hereto there shall be deemed incorporated and made a part thereof all of the provisions of this Standard License Agreement as if therein fully set forth. This agreement of License and said Short Form shall be for all purposes deemed one complete and single instrument.

WARRANTY AS TO FORM

The distributor warrants that this license agreement contains all of the provisions of the twenty-six (26) numbered articles of the "Standard License Agreement" recommended by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, an authenticated copy of which has been filed with each of said organizations. That any and all additional provisions are not inconsistent with or in contradiction of the provisions of said numbered articles and are printed or written in the Schedule of the Short Form under the caption "Added Articles"; and that any such added provision shall be deemed to have been so added after the date of the recommendation of this form of Standard License Agreement, to conform with the distributor's own business policy.

LICENSE AND TIME AND PLACE OF EXHIBITION

First: Subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter stated, and those specified in the Short Form in which by reference hereto all the provisions hereof shall be deemed incorporated therein, the distributor hereby grants to the exhibitor and the exhibitor accepts a limited license under the respective copyrights of the motion pictures designated and described in the Schedule of the said Short Form all the provisions of print shall be deemed to include the records, discs and any other device which by this reference thereto are made a part hereof as if herein fully set forth; and if in such Short Form it is provided that this license is for sound motion pictures, under any copyright of any matter included in any sound recorded therefor, to exhibit publicly said motion pictures and to reproduce for public performances such recorded sound in synchronism therewith, but only at the said theatre for the number of successive days and for the sums in the said Schedule specified and for no other use or purpose. Each such license so to reproduce such recorded sound is granted upon the exhibitor's express warranty and upon condition (a) that the sound reproducing equipment in the said theatre will operate reliably and efficiently to reproduce such recorded sound with adequate volume and high quality whether recorded upon a print or upon records, discs or other similar devices; and (b) if copyrighted musical compositions are included in such recorded sound, the exhibitor now has or will have at the date or dates of the exhibition of each of such motion pictures and the reproduction of such recorded sound, an effective license from the copyright proprietor or from any licensee of the copyright proprietor to perform publicly the said copyrighted musical compositions. The distributor reserves the right to record the sound for reproduction in synchronism with the exhibition of said motion pictures or any of them on the print thereof or on records or discs as the distributor may from time to time determine, provided that if the sound reproducing equipment in said theatre will reproduce sound recorded only on prints or only on discs, as represented and specified by the exhibitor in the Short Form, then upon written notice to the exhibitor of the recording of such sound only by means other than that specified in the Short Form, the exhibitor shall have the right to cancel this license agreement as to all motion pictures affected by such other method of recording upon written notice to such effect given to the distributor not later than fourteen (14) days after the receipt by the exhibitor of the said notice of the distributor and upon the giving of such notice by the exhibitor the license as to each such picture shall terminate and revert to the distributor. If, however, the sound reproducing equipment in said theatre is thereafter during the term hereof changed by the exhibitor and as then changed reproduces sound recorded by such other method of recording, the exhibitor's notice of cancellation shall be deemed revoked and the license of said motion pictures affected thereby reinstated upon written notice to such effect by the distributor, provided that said motion pictures shall not have been in the meantime licensed to another exhibitor for the same run in the same locality as that granted to the exhibitor and specified in the Short Form.

If more than one theatre is designated no motion picture is licensed hereunder for exhibition at more than one of such theatres unless otherwise specifically agreed upon in the Short Form.

Provided this license is for sound motion pictures and the recorded sound is not recorded upon a print, all references hereinafter made to a disc upon which sound is recorded for reproduction in synchronism with the exhibition of a print.

PAYMENT UPON PERCENTAGE BASIS

SECOND: (a) If the license fee or any part thereof, of any of said motion pictures shall be computed upon the exhibitor's receipts, or any part thereof, the exhibitor shall deliver to the distributor at the end of each day's exhibition a correct itemized statement of the gross receipts of said theatre for admission thereto upon the exhibition date or dates of each motion picture for which payment is so required to be made, signed by the exhibitor or the exhibitor's manager and the exhibitor's cashier or treasurer, which statement shall include such additional facts and figures, if required in the Schedule, for the determination of the license fee. Should the distributor so require, such itemized statement shall be made upon forms furnished by the distributor. Upon the exhibition date or dates of each motion picture an authorized representative of the distributor is hereby given the right to verify the sale of all tickets of admission to said theatre, and the receipts therefrom; and for such purpose shall have access to the theatre, including the box office, and also the right to examine all entries relating to such gross receipts and such facts and figures in all the exhibitor's books and records, and if hereunder it is provided that the exhibitor make certain expenditures and/or deductions, to examine all entries relating to such expenditures and/or deductions. The distributor, or its authorized representative, also shall have access for a period of four (4) months after the receipt by the distributor of each such statement, to all entries in all of the exhibitor's books and records relating to such gross receipts, expenditures and/or deductions and such facts and figures for the purpose of verifying such statement. The distributor agrees, unless such representative is an employee of the distributor or employed as a checker, not to employ as a representative for such purpose any person a resident of or employed in the place where the said theatre is located, other than a person engaged in business as an accountant. The distributor agrees that any information obtained pursuant to the provisions of this clause will be treated as confidential, excepting in any arbitration proceeding or litigation in respect to this license.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES FOR BREACH IF LICENSED UPON PERCENTAGE BASIS

(b) If the license fee or any part thereof, of any of said motion pictures shall be computed either in whole or in part, upon a percentage of the admission receipts of said theatre or any part thereof or upon a percentage of such receipts and a fixed sum and if the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit any such motion picture as herein provided, the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor as liquidated damages for each day that the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion picture, a sum equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre during the period of thirty (30) operating days immediately prior to the date or dates when said motion picture should have been so exhibited, hereunder or, as the case may be, equal to such percentage of said average daily gross receipts plus such fixed sum provided, however, that if the exhibitor shall exhibit such motion picture for less than the full number of days provided for in the Short Form, for each day less than the said full number of days, the sum equal to sixty-five per cent (65%) of the gross receipts of said theatre during the last day of the exhibition thereof of such motion picture. A sworn statement of the said daily gross receipts shall be delivered by the exhibitor to the distributor upon demand therefor.

TERM

THIRD: The term of this agreement shall begin with the date fixed or determined as hereinafter provided for the exhibition at the said theatre of the first motion picture deliverable hereunder and shall continue for a period of one year thereafter unless otherwise in the Short Form provided; or unless any of the motion pictures shall not be available for exhibition hereunder during said period of one year by reason of the provisions of Article Eighth hereof, then the said one year term shall be deemed to be extended to the date of the expiration of the period of protection, if any, granted in respect to the last of said motion pictures deliverable hereunder and if no period of protection shall have been granted then to the last date of exhibition hereunder of such last motion picture.

DELIVERY AND EXHIBITION OF PRINTS

FOURTH: (a) The distributor agrees during the term of the license and within a reasonable time after each of said motion pictures is generally released for public exhibition and become available for exhibition by the exhibitor hereunder to deliver to the exhibitor a print in physical condition for exhibition, and if the license is for sound motion pictures, which will clearly reproduce the recorded sound in synchronism therewith, and the exhibitor agrees to exhibit such print of each of said motion pictures upon the date or dates during said term as herein provided. Such date or dates so fixed or determined shall be for all purposes the exhibition date or dates of each such motion picture as though definitely specified in the Short Form before execution thereof by the exhibitor.

GENERAL AND PRE-RELEASE

(b) The public exhibition of any of said motion pictures for three (3) consecutive days at prices customarily and usually charged for admission to the theatre where so exhibited in the territory wherein is located the exchange out of which the exhibitor is served, excepting any "road show," "tryout," "pre-view," or "pre-release" exhibitions thereof, shall be deemed the general release for public exhibition of such motion picture but only in such territory. A "pre-release" exhibition shall be deemed any exhibition because of seasonal conditions making desirable exhibitions in advance of general release as herein defined.

EXHIBITION IN ORDER OF GENERAL RELEASE

(c) The exhibitor agrees to exhibit each of the motion pictures licensed hereunder in the order of its general release by the distributor in the exchange territory in which the said theatre is located. The exhibitor shall have the right to select any of the motion pictures for exhibition out of the order of its general release, subject to prior runs and/or protections granted other exhibitors, on the date or dates determined as provided in Article Seventh hereof or otherwise agreed upon, but only upon the following conditions (a) that the exhibitor is not in default hereunder and shall have fully complied with all the provisions, if any, set forth in the Short Form for the exhibition of one or more of said motion pictures at specified intervals; and (b) that the distributor and the exhibitor shall then agree upon the date or dates upon which all of the motion pictures generally released prior to the general release of such motion pictures and available for exhibition hereunder shall be exhibited by the exhibitor, which date or dates shall be within thirty days from the first exhibition date of the motion picture to be exhibited out of the order of its general release; or in the alternative the exhibitor shall then pay to the distributor the license fee for each of such motion pictures then generally released and available for exhibition hereunder, and as to any thereof which shall not be exhibited by the exhibitor within thirty days from the first exhibition date of the motion picture to be exhibited out of the order of its general release, the grant of the run and protection period in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the exhibitor. Upon the failure or refusal of the exhibitor to exhibit any of such motion pictures then generally released and available for exhibition hereunder within said thirty days period or to pay the license fee thereof, the right of the exhibitor to thereafter select for exhibition any motion picture out of the order of its general release shall be forfeited. The provisions of this paragraph (c) shall not be deemed to limit or qualify the provisions of Article Seventh hereof excepting as in this paragraph (c) specifically provided.

DELIVERY BY DISTRIBUTOR

FIFTH: The Distributor shall make deliveries hereunder to the Exhibitor, or the Exhibitor's authorized agent, by delivery at the Distributor's exchange, or to a common carrier, or to the United States Postal Authorities. If deliveries are made to a carrier they shall be made in accordance with the carrier's delivery schedule in time to reach the place where the said theatre is located in sufficient time for inspection and projection before the usual time for the opening of the said theatre.

ACCEPTANCE

SIXTH: Unless notice of acceptance of this application by the distributor is sent to the exhibitor by mail or telegram within the number of days after the date thereof hereinafter specified (immediately following the name of the city wherein is situated the exchange of the distributor from which the exhibitor is served, or if such city is not hereinafter named then within the number of days specified immediately following the city hereinafter named nearest thereto) said application shall be deemed withdrawn and the distributor shall forthwith return any sums paid on account thereof by the exhibitor. Albany, 10; Atlanta, 20; Boston, 10; Buffalo, 10; Charleston, 15; Charlotte, 15; Chicago, 15; Cincinnati, 20; Cleveland, 15; Dallas, 30; Denver, 20; Des Moines, 15; Detroit, 15; Indianapolis, 15; Jacksonville, 15; Kansas City, 15; Los Angeles, 25; Little Rock, 15; Louisville, 15; Memphis, 20; Milwaukee, 15; Northern New Jersey, 7; Minneapolis, 20; Butte, 30; New Haven, 10; New Orleans, 15; New York City, 7; Oklahoma City, 20; Omaha, 20; Peoria, 15; Philadelphia, 10; Pittsburgh, 14; Portland, Ore., 30; St. Louis, 15; Salt Lake City, 30; San Francisco, 25; Seattle, 30; Washington, D. C., 14.

SELECTION OR DESIGNATION OF PLAYDATES

SEVENTH: The exhibition date or dates of each motion picture unless definitely specified or otherwise provided for in the Short Form or otherwise agreed upon shall be determined as follows:

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY

1. Subject to prior runs and/or protection granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors and within a reasonable time after a print or prints of any of said motion pictures are received at the exchange of the distributor out of which the exhibitor is served and any such motion picture then being available for exhibition by the exhibitor hereunder the distributor, provided the exhibitor is not in default hereunder, shall mail to the exhibitor a notice in writing of the date when such motion picture will be available for exhibition by the exhibitor, such date being hereinafter referred to as the "available date." Such notice shall be mailed to the exhibitor at least fifteen days before the "available date" therein specified.

SELECTION BY EXHIBITOR

2. The exhibitor shall within fourteen days after the mailing of such notice select the exhibition date or dates, within the period commencing with the available date and ending thirty days thereafter, by giving to the distributor written notice of the date or dates so selected. If the exhibition date or dates so selected by the exhibitor are not open for the exhibitor because such date or dates have been previously assigned to another or other exhibitors then the exhibition date or dates shall be determined as provided in the following paragraphs (a) and (b).

(a) If other dates within said thirty day period are open the exhibitor shall immediately select from such other open dates another date or other dates, failing to do so then the distributor shall have the right to designate such date or dates within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the date first selected by the exhibitor and written notice thereof shall be given or mailed the exhibitor fourteen (14) days before the date so designated by the distributor.

(b) If no other date or dates within the said thirty day period are open then the exhibitor shall designate the date or dates which shall be within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the last day of the said thirty day period and written notice thereof shall be immediately given or mailed to the distributor by the exhibitor. If the exhibitor fails to so designate such date or dates then the distributor shall have the right to make such designation within the same period and written notice thereof shall be mailed to the exhibitor fourteen days before the date so designated by the distributor.

FAILURE TO EXHIBIT

3. If the exhibition date or dates of any motion picture are not selected by the exhibitor as hereinbefore provided or otherwise agreed upon or the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion picture on the date or dates designated by the distributor if designated as provided in paragraphs "a" and "b" hereof then the sum or sums payable hereunder for the license to exhibit such motion picture forthwith shall become due and payable and the grant, if any, of the run and/or protection period in respect to such motion picture shall be deemed revoked with the right to the exhibitor if such payment has been made to exhibit such motion picture hereunder upon written request mailed or delivered to the distributor within sixty days after the available date therefor upon a date or dates not in conflict with any run and/or protection period granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors, failing to make such request within said period of time the license of such motion picture granted hereunder shall terminate and revert to the distributor. Nothing contained in this paragraph 3 shall deprive the exhibitor of the right to offer, upon the hearing or trial of any controversy arising hereunder, competent evidence in mitigation of damages.

FIRST RUN EXHIBITIONS

EIGHTH: (a) If in the Short Form the exhibitor is granted a first run of the said motion pictures, the exhibitor shall exhibit each of the feature motion pictures excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Article within the period beginning with the date scheduled and announced by the distributor for the general release of each feature motion picture in the territory wherein is located the exchange of the distributor out of which the exhibitor is served and ending one hundred and twenty (120) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Article Seventh hereof to the contrary. If the first exhibition date of any of the said motion pictures shall occur on a date later than ninety (90) days after its scheduled and announced general release date, then the period of protection of such motion picture shall be reduced so as to expire one hundred and twenty (120) days after said scheduled date of its general release. Upon the failure of the exhibitor to exhibit any feature motion picture within said period of one hundred and twenty (120) days, the grant of the said first run and the protection period in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the distributor, with the right to the exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Article provided.

SECOND RUN EXHIBITIONS

(b) If in the Short Form the exhibitor is granted a second run of the said motion pictures and any other exhibitor having been granted the first run thereof immediately prior to such second run fails to exhibit any of the feature motion pictures, excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Article within the said period of one hundred and twenty (120) days specified in Paragraph (a) of this Article, the exhibitor shall exhibit each such feature motion picture within the period beginning with the date of the expiration of the said one hundred and twenty (120) days period and ending fourteen (14) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Article Seventh hereof to the contrary. Upon the failure of the exhibitor to exhibit any such feature motion picture within said fourteen (14) days period the grant of such second run and the protection period if any in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the distributor with the right to the exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Article provided.

SUBSEQUENT RUNS EXHIBITIONS

(c) If in the Short Form the exhibitor is granted a run subsequent to a second run of the said motion pictures and any other exhibitor having been granted the second run thereof immediately prior to such subsequent run fails to exhibit any of the feature motion pictures, excepting those described in Paragraph (d) of this Article within the said period of fourteen (14) days specified in Paragraph (b) of this Article the exhibitor shall exhibit each feature motion picture within the period beginning with the date of the expiration of the said fourteen day period and ending seven (7) days thereafter, notwithstanding any provision of Article Seventh hereof to the contrary. Upon the failure of the exhibitor to exhibit any such feature motion picture within said seven (7) day period, the grant of such subsequent run and the protection period if any in respect thereof shall be deemed waived by the exhibitor and the license fee as to such feature motion picture shall thereupon forthwith become due and payable to the distributor with the right to the exhibitor to exhibit such feature motion picture as hereinafter in Paragraph (e) of this Article provided.

EXTENDED RUNS

(d) Any of the motion pictures which shall have been exhibited at any theatre in the said territory for more than one show week prior to the run in the Short Form granted the exhibitor shall be excepted from the provisions of this Article and of Paragraph (b) of Article Fourth.

EXHIBITOR AFTER REVOCATION OF RUN AND PROTECTION

(e) Upon the revocation of the grant of the run and/or the protection period of any feature motion picture as provided in Paragraphs (a), (b) or (c) of this Article, the exhibitor upon payment of the sum or sums payable hereunder as provided in this Article for the license to exhibit such feature motion picture, shall have the right to exhibit the same hereunder upon a date or dates not in conflict with any run and/or protection period granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors, upon written request mailed or delivered to the distributor within sixty (60) days after the last date upon which such feature motion picture should have been exhibited by the exhibitor as provided in this Article. Failing to make such request within said period of sixty (60) days the license to exhibit such feature motion picture granted hereunder shall terminate and revert to the distributor.

ASSIGNMENT UPON SALE OF THEATRE

NINTH: This license shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other, provided, that if the exhibitor sells the said theatre or transfers any interest therein and is not in default hereunder, the exhibitor may assign this license to the purchaser of the theatre or of such interest without the written consent of the distributor but any such assignment shall not be valid or of any effect hereunder unless a written acceptance thereof by the assignee assuming the obligations of the exhibitor shall be delivered to the distributor. Any such assignment shall not release the exhibitor from any liability hereunder unless such release from liability is consented to by the distributor in writing.

VERBAL PROMISES; CHANGES IN WRITING

TENTH: This license agreement is complete and all promises, representations, understandings and agreements in reference thereto have been expressed herein.

No change or modification hereof or changes in or modification of the Short Form shall be binding upon the distributor unless in writing signed by an officer of or any person duly authorized by the distributor at its main office in New York City, excepting in an emergency and only then a change or modification may be consented to in writing but only by the representative of the distributor managing the distributor's exchange out of which the exhibitor is served provided such change or modification does not change or modify the run, and/or protection period, or decrease any license fee specified in the Short Form.

RETURN OF PRINTS BY EXHIBITOR

ELEVENTH: The exhibitor shall promptly after the last exhibition on the last date of the license period of each motion picture return the print thereof, with the reels and containers furnished therewith, to the distributor's exchange or deliver the same to a carrier designated or used by the distributor for delivery to such exchange or as otherwise directed by written instructions of the distributor for delivery to another exhibitor in each case adequately valued or insured and the exhibitor shall pay all transportation charges but not exceeding a sum equal to the cost of transporting a print from the distributor's exchange to the exhibitor and returning it to the distributor's exchange and if insured all insurance charges therefor.

LOSS OF OR DAMAGE TO PRINTS

TWELFTH: The exhibitor shall immediately notify the distributor's exchange by telegram of the loss, theft, destruction of or damage to any print and the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor a sum equal to the cost of replacement at the distributor's exchange for each linear foot thereof and if this license is for sound motion pictures for each record and for each record case, lost, stolen, destroyed or damaged in any way in the interval between the delivery to and the return thereof by the exhibitor. The exhibitor shall not be liable for the damage to or destruction of any print provided such damage or destruction occurred while in transit from the exhibitor and provided that such print was adequately valued or insured by the exhibitor. Provided the exhibitor is not in default hereunder the distributor shall at the option of the exhibitor repay or credit to the exhibitor any sum so paid for a lost or stolen print, excepting "news reels," upon the return thereof to the distributor within sixty days after the date when the same should have been returned hereunder. All claims by the exhibitor on account of the condition of the late or non-arrival of a print, or by the distributor because of damage thereto by the exhibitor shall be barred hereunder unless any such claim if made by the exhibitor, shall be made by a telegram setting forth fully the condition complained of sent by the exhibitor to the distributor prior to the second public exhibition thereof, or if delivery of a print has been delayed, within one hour of its arrival; if any such claim is made by the distributor unless a notice in writing by the distributor is sent to the exhibitor within forty-eight (48) hours, Sundays excepted, of the receipt by the distributor of a damaged print or of a notice by another exhibitor that a print was received by such other exhibitor in a damaged condition.

DESCRIPTION

THIRTEENTH: The distributor shall have and hereby reserves the right in the sole discretion of the distributor to change the title of any of the motion pictures specified in the Schedule, to make changes in, alterations and adaptations of any story, book or play and to substitute for any thereof any other story, book or play excepting for those based upon a well known named book or play.

The distributor also shall have the right to change the director, the cast or any member thereof of any of said motion pictures but the exhibitor shall not be required to accept for any feature motion picture described in the Short Form as that of a named star or star combination or as the production of a named director or as that of a well known named book or play any feature motion picture of any other star or the production of any other director or of any other hook or play as the case may be.

REISSUES

FOURTEENTH: The distributor warrants that none of the licensed feature motion pictures are reissues of old negatives, old negatives retitled, or foreign produced by a foreign producer, excepting those specifically set forth as such in the Short Form.

ADVERTISING

FIFTEENTH: The distributor warrants that the said motion picture will not contain any advertising matter for which compensation is received by the distributor.

CUTTING OR ALTERATION OF PRINTS

SIXTEENTH: The exhibitor shall exhibit each print in its entirety and shall not copy, duplicate, sub-rent or part with possession of any print. The exhibitor shall not cut or alter any print, excepting to make necessary repairs thereto, or when required by any duly constituted public official or authority or with the written or telegraphic consent of the distributor. The exhibitor however may cut the print of a news reel. The exhibitor shall return each print in the same condition as received, reasonable wear only excepted.

ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES

SEVENTEENTH: The exhibitor shall not lease or sell any advertising accessories purchased from the distributor by the exhibitor for use in connection with the exhibition of any of said motion pictures.

PROTECTION AND RUN

EIGHTEENTH: The run and protection period, if any, granted the exhibitor shall be specified in the Short Form; and if a protection period granted shall affect alike two or more theatres a waiver of such protection period by the exhibitor as to any one of such theatres shall be deemed to be a waiver of such protection period as to all such theatres. The distributor shall not grant a license to exhibit any of said motion pictures for exhibition on a date prior to the "run" or prior to the expiration of the "protection period" if any in the Short Form specified at any theatre named in the Short Form or within the territorial limits therein specified. Such period of protection as to each of said motion pictures shall be computed from the last date of the exhibition thereof licensed hereunder. If protection is granted against a named theatre or theatres indicating that it is the intention of the distributor to grant such protection against all theatres in the immediate vicinity of the exhibitor's theatre then unless otherwise provided in the Short Form, such protection shall include any theatre in such vicinity thereafter erected or opened.

ADVERTISING PRIOR TO FIRST RUN

NINETEENTH: If the exhibitor is granted a second or subsequent "run" of the said motion pictures the exhibitor shall not advertise any thereof by any means of advertising prior to or during the exhibition of any one of said motion pictures by any other exhibitor having the right to the first or a prior run thereof and charging admission prices higher than the prices charged for admission to the exhibitor's theatre, excepting advertising inside the theatre not intended for removal therefrom by the public, unless the first date of exhibition hereunder of any such motion picture shall be within fifteen days from the last exhibition date of such first or prior run exhibition, in which case the exhibitor shall have the right to advertise the exhibition of such motion picture but shall not in any advertising thereof announce or state that the prices charged for admission are or will be less than the admission prices charged by the exhibitor having the first or prior run of such motion picture. Nothing in this Article contained shall be deemed to prohibit the exhibitor from advertising generally all of said motion pictures as a group but such general advertising shall not refer to any one of said motion pictures during its exhibition by any other exhibitor having the first or immediately prior run thereof, excepting as herein provided. For a breach of the provisions of this paragraph the distributor shall have in addition to all other rights the right to exclude and except from this license any motion picture advertised in violation of the provisions hereof by written notice to such effect mailed to the exhibitor and upon the mailing of such notice the license of such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the distributor.

TAXES

TWENTIETH: The exhibitor shall pay to the distributor upon demand, any tax, fee or other like charge now and/or hereafter imposed or based upon the delivery and/or the exhibition of prints of motion pictures and/or upon the sums payable under this license by the exhibitor to the distributor. If under any statute or ordinance any such tax, fee or other like charge is or shall be payable or paid by the distributor and the exact amount payable hereunder by the exhibitor is not therein definitely fixed or cannot be exactly determined, then the exhibitor shall pay such part of any such tax, fee or other like charge paid or payable by the distributor as shall be fixed in the manner determined by the then President of the American Arbitration Association.

ADMISSION CHARGE

TWENTY-FIRST: The exhibitor during the whole of the license period of each of the motion pictures shall charge each adult for admission to said theatre not less than the sum of ten cents unless a greater minimum admission charge is herein elsewhere specified. If during any such period less than said sum of ten cents or such greater minimum charge is charged for admission to said theatre, the distributor, in addition to all other rights, shall have the right at the option of the distributor to immediately terminate the license of the motion picture then being exhibited by written notice to such effect and upon the giving of such notice the license of such motion picture shall forthwith terminate and revert to the distributor.

PREVENTION OF PERFORMANCE

TWENTY-SECOND: If the exhibitor shall be prevented from exhibiting or the distributor from delivering any of the said motion pictures for causes beyond their direct control then this license in respect to each such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the distributor without liability on the part of either party provided reasonable written notice of such termination and the cause thereof is given.

PICTURES NOT GENERALLY RELEASED

TWENTY-THIRD: If any one or more of said motion pictures excepting the motion pictures which may be "roadshown," shall not be generally released by the distributor for distribution in the United States during the period specified in the Short Form each such motion picture shall be excluded from this license unless the exhibitor shall give written notice to the distributor not later than thirty days after the end of said period that the exhibitor elects to exhibit hereunder all such motion pictures. If written notice of such election be given as aforesaid, the distributor shall deliver and the exhibitor shall exhibit each such motion picture when available for exhibition hereunder excepting that any thereof not so "generally released" within two years after the end of said period shall be also excepted and excluded from this license. The distributor shall have the right to exhibit or license the exhibition of any motion picture so excepted and excluded when and where desired by the distributor and all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereof are hereby expressly waived by the exhibitor.

OPTION TO EXCLUDE IF GROUP LICENSED

TWENTY-FOURTH: Provided the exhibitor is not in default hereunder and shall have fully complied with all of the provisions, if any, set forth in the Short Form for the exhibition of one or more of the feature motion pictures licensed hereunder at specified intervals and not less than twenty feature motion pictures have been licensed hereunder at one time, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this license not to exceed five (5%) per cent of the total number of the feature motion pictures so licensed but only upon the following conditions: (a) that the license fee of each feature motion picture licensed hereunder including the score charge, if any, averages less than $251.00 or if the license fee of each feature motion picture is to be computed upon a percentage of the receipts or any part thereof of the exhibitor's theatre, that the license fee of each of such feature motion pictures exhibited at said theatre during the term hereof shall have averaged less than the sum of $251.00; (b) that the exhibitor shall give to the distributor written notice of the exhibitor's election to exclude any of said feature motion pictures not later than fourteen days before the date or dates fixed for its exhibition hereunder and at the same time shall pay to the distributor the license fee therefor specified in the schedule, unless such license fee is to be computed upon a percentage of the receipts of the exhibitor's theatre in which case no license fee or score charge, if any, need be paid to the distributor as a condition for excluding such feature motion picture, excepting as hereinafter in this paragraph provided; and (c) that if the license fee computed upon a percentage of the receipts or any part thereof of the exhibitor's theatre including the score charge of each of the feature motion pictures licensed and exhibited hereunder averages a sum in excess of $250.00 then the exhibitor shall within thirty days after the expiration of the term hereof exhibit hereunder as herein provided each of the feature motion pictures, the license fees of which are to be computed upon a percentage of the said receipts but excluded from this license by the exhibitor pursuant to the provisions of this article, and the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor the license fee therefor.

In computing the said five (5%) per cent of the total number of feature motion pictures licensed hereunder fractions of less than one-half shall be disregarded.

Upon the failure or refusal of the exhibitor to fully and completely comply with each and every condition hereinabove in this article specified and upon which the exhibitor is granted the right to exclude any of the feature motion pictures licensed hereunder, such right to exclude any feature motion picture and thereafter to exclude from this license additional feature motion pictures, shall thereupon forthwith terminate and shall not again be granted hereunder during the term hereof.

Provided that before the expiration of the term of this license agreement the exhibitor shall have exhibited as in this license provided all of the feature motion pictures specified in the Schedule and generally released for public exhibition as defined in Paragraph (b) of Article Fourth hereof excepting those, if any, excluded as provided in this Article and shall have paid to the distributor at the times herein specified, the license fee of each thereof, the distributor within thirty days after the expiration of the term of this license agreement shall pay to the exhibitor a sum equal to the aggregate of the license fees of the feature motion pictures excluded by the exhibitor from this license as provided in this Article paid by the exhibitor to the distributor.

Upon the exclusion of each of the feature motion pictures permitted by the provisions of this Article the run and protection period, if any, granted the exhibitor in respect thereto shall be deemed waived by the exhibitor and the license thereof shall thereupon terminate and revert to the distributor.

RACIAL OR RELIGIOUS SUBJECT MATTER

TWENTY-FIFTH: If the exhibitor shall claim that the exhibition of any motion picture licensed hereunder at the said theatre will be offensive to the public in the place where such theatre is located, because of racial or religious subject matter, and if the exhibitor shall give written notice to the distributor of such claim within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for the exhibition thereof hereunder, such claim shall be immediately submitted to the Board of Arbitration herein specified. If such Board of Arbitration shall specifically determine that the exhibition of such motion picture at said theatre will be offensive to the said public because of racial or religious subject matter, then such motion picture shall be excepted from the license and the license thereof revert to the distributor. The distributor may exhibit or license the exhibition of any motion picture so excepted when and where desired by the distributor free from all claims of the exhibitor.

If the distributor shall be of the opinion that any motion picture licensed hereunder will be offensive to the public in the place where the exhibitor's theatre is located, because of racial or religious subject matter, the distributor shall have the right to except and exclude such motion picture from this license, upon condition that such motion picture shall not thereafter be licensed for exhibition in such place unless such racial or religious subject matter is eliminated therefrom during the term hereof in which case such motion picture shall again be deemed licensed hereunder.

ROAD SHOWS

TWENTY-SIXTH: The distributor shall have the right to exhibit and/or cause to be exhibited as a "roadshow," at any time prior to the exhibition hereunder, such of the motion pictures licensed hereunder as the distributor may from time to time select and determine, provided, however, that such roadshow exhibitions shall be at theatres at which admission prices for evening performances, during such exhibitions thereof, of not less than one dollar shall be charged for the majority of the orchestra seats, and further provided that, except in the cities of New York and Los Angeles, not more than two of such motion pictures shall be so roadshown.

If any such roadshow exhibition shall be in the city of New York, N. Y., and if the exhibitor's theatre be situated in a territory then served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges located in said City, the distributor shall have the right to except and exclude from this license any such motion picture (not exceeding in the aggregate two of such motion pictures) so roadshown in said City upon sending written notice to such effect to the exhibitor not later than eight weeks after the commencement of such roadshow exhibition in such City, provided the distributor shall be like notice except and exclude such motion picture from all other license agreements containing this Article and licensing the exhibition of such motion pictures in such territory. Such exception and exclusion shall not be affected in case the distributor shall inadvertently omit to send such notice to any of such other exhibitors.

If any such roadshow exhibition shall be in the city of Los Angeles, Cal., and if the exhibitor's theatre be situated in the territory then served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges located in said City, the distributor shall have the right to except and exclude from this license any such motion picture (not exceeding in the aggregate two of such motion pictures) so roadshown in said City, upon the same terms and conditions above provided for the exception and exclusion of motion pictures roadshown in the city of New York.

If and when any such roadshow exhibition (except any roadshow exhibition in New York and/or Los Angeles) shall be in the territory served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges serving the exhibitor's theatre, such motion picture so roadshown in such territory shall forthwith be excepted and excluded from this license. The distributor shall send written notice to that effect, to the exhibitor within fourteen (14) days after such roadshow exhibition commences.

The distributor may so exercise such right to except and exclude any such motion picture from time to time, in the respective territories, as above defined, in the United States. Any motion picture so roadshown in any place in the United States and not excepted and excluded from this license as aforesaid, shall not be deemed available for exhibition hereunder until after the completion of such roadshowing of such motion picture in the United States, and such motion picture shall be exhibited hereunder as and when available.

For each motion picture that the distributor shall except and exclude, as aforesaid, the exhibitor is hereby granted the option to except and exclude from this license one of the other motion pictures licensed hereunder, but only if the exhibitor shall give to the distributor written notice to such effect not later than fourteen days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of such other motion picture. The distributor may exhibit and/or license the exhibition of any and all motion pictures excepted and excluded from this license by the distributor and/or the exhibitor, as aforesaid, when and where desired by the distributor, free from all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereof and the license of each thereof shall forthwith upon exclusion as hereinbefore provided terminate and revert to the distributor.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The distributor and exhibitor organizations before named respectfully recommend to all distributors and exhibitors of motion pictures in the United States the use of the foregoing Standard License Agreement and recommend:

That a copy of every application signed by the exhibitor, be left with the exhibitor at the time of signing and in the event of acceptance as therein provided a duplicate copy signed by the distributor be forwarded to the exhibitor within a reasonable time thereafter.

That in a Short Form License Agreement there be specified (a) whether the license is for the exhibition of sound or silent motion pictures or both; (b) the license fee of each motion picture; (c) the number of days for which each is licensed; (d) the run and protection period, if any, agreed upon; (e) any provision in respect of the exhibition date or dates of the several motion pictures; (f) an identifying description of each motion picture, excepting in long term and/or franchise and/or service license agreements providing for more than one year's "releases," the motion pictures be generally identified as motion pictures released by the distributor or by any like general description, and in such long term and/or franchise and/or service license agreements the provisions of the Standard License Agreement be incorporated therein, excepting further that any "short subject" motion picture be identified or described by a brand or other similar description; and (g) all additional provisions permitted by the numbered articles of the Standard License Agreement as well as all additional clauses.

That "news reels" or "short subjects" be licensed without requiring the licensing of feature motion pictures or vice versa, excepting that the distributor may include in any long term, franchise and/or service license agreement feature motion pictures and/or "short subject" motion pictures and/or "news reels."

That the following clause be added to the Short Form License Agreement only in respect, of photoplays produced by a producer not controlled by the distributor, but only if the distributor's contract with such producer provides that such pictures shall be sold separately and apart from other pictures distributed by the distributor, and that it be of no effect unless specifically agreed to in writing by the exhibitor:

"The distributor's right to approve or reject this application or any other application signed by the exhibitor at the same time, or any other time, is not dependent upon the approval or rejection by the distributor of such other application or this application."

Dated July 1, 1930.

STANDARD SHORT FORM LICENSE AGREEMENT

Agreement of license under copyright made in one or more counter-parts between..... a corporation (hereinafter referred to as the distributor, party of the first part) and the exhibitor (hereinafter named and referred to as the exhibitor operating the theatre hereinafter designated at the end hereof, party of the second part).

WITNESSETH:

The parties hereto agree:

FIRST: Subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter stated and those specified in the Standard License Agreement negotiated and agreed to on July 1, 1930, by Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and which by this reference thereto shall be deemed incorporated in and made a part hereof as if herein fully set forth in one complete and single instrument, the distributor hereby grants to the exhibitor and the exhibitor accepts a limited license under the respective copyrights of the motion pictures designated and described in the Schedule hereof.

PAYMENT

SECOND: The exhibitor agrees to pay to the distributor for such license as to each such motion picture the fixed sums specified in the Schedule hereof at least four (4) days in advance of the date of delivery of a print thereof at the distributor's exchange or of the date of shipment thereof to the exhibitor by another exhibitor, unless after the acceptance of this application by the distributor such payment is otherwise agreed to by the distributor in writing signed by an office of or any person duly authorized by the distributor at its main office in New York City. If the license fee or any part thereof of any of the said motion pictures shall be computed upon the exhibitor's receipts or any part thereof, the exhibitor agrees to pay such license fee to the distributor upon demand therefor at the end of each day's exhibition of each of such feature motion pictures and in the absence of such demand to pay to the distributor such license fee immediately after the last exhibition upon the last date of such exhibition thereof; or if the license period of any of such motion pictures is longer than one week then as to each such motion picture, to pay the license fee thereof to the distributor immediately after the last exhibition of each of such motion pictures at the end of each week.

RUN:..... PROTECTION:.....

THIRD: (strike out (a) or (b) as the case may be).

(a) This license is not for sound pictures. (b) This license is for sound pictures and the exhibitor represents that the sound reproducing equipment in said theatre will reproduce prints sound recorded on and (unless equipment will reproduce sound on discs..... prints and on discs strike out the words "and discs" or the words "prints and" as the case may be).

REPRESENTATIONS AS TO FIRST RUNS

FOURTH: All agreements or representations that the feature motion pictures specified in the Schedule will be exhibited and/or licensed for exhibition prior to their exhibition hereunder at one or more theatres shall be set forth in writing in the Schedule.

FIFTH: The releasing period for general distribution in the United States of the motion pictures specified herein begins..... and ends.....

ACCEPTANCE OF APPLICATION

SIXTH: This instrument shall be deemed an application for a license under copyright only and shall not become binding until accepted in writing without alteration or change by an office of or any person duly authorized by the distributor and notice of acceptance sent to the exhibitor as provided in the Standard License Agreement. The deposit by the distributor of any check or other consideration given by the exhibitor at the time of application as payment on account of any sums payable hereunder or the delivery of a print of any of the motion pictures or the sale of any advertising accessories shall not be deemed an acceptance hereof by the distributor.

ONE APPLICATION

SEVENTH: This application and any application for other motion pictures of the distributor executed by the exhibitor at the same time shall be deemed, but only for the purpose of Article Sixth of the Standard License Agreement, one application unless an agreement to the contrary contained herein is specifically signed by the exhibitor.

ARBITRATION

If the exhibitor or the distributor shall not elect to arbitrate as provided in Article Eighth opposite hereto, said article shall be stricken from this License Agreement and here intimated before execution by the Exhibitor or by the Distributor before acceptance, as the case may be.

EIGHTH: The exhibitor and the distributor respectively, freely and voluntarily agree that as a condition precedent to the commencement of any action or proceedings in any court by either of them to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereunder, each shall submit all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination by arbitration (hereby expressly waiving the oath of the arbitrators) pursuant to Rules of Arbitration, copies of which have been deposited with the American Arbitration Association, 521 Fifth Avenue, New York City, bearing date, July 1, 1930, and identified by the signatures of the respective duly authorized officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and by this reference made a part hereof as if herein fully set forth, a copy of which shall be furnished to the exhibitor and the distributor upon request therefor.

The hearing of any such controversy shall be had before the Arbitration Board in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the distributor from which the exhibitor is served, or if there be no such Arbitration Board in such city, then before the Arbitration Board in the city nearest thereto, unless the parties agree in writing that such hearing be had in some other place. If either party fails or refuses to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy, the other party may apply to a United States District Court, or to any other court, including a court of a state in which such hearing would otherwise not be had, for an order to proceed to arbitrate in which case such hearing shall be had in such place as the court to which such application is made may lawfully direct; and if an order is made by any such court directing that such hearing be had in a place where there is no such Arbitration Board, the arbitrators appointed in accordance with the said Rules of Arbitration shall convene at the place ordered by such court. Upon the failure or refusal of such arbitrators to convene at the time and place directed by order of such court, and to hear and determine such claim or controversy, other arbitrators shall be appointed by such court in the manner provided by law.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of the arbitrators and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any Court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the law of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force.

If the exhibitor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the award of the arbitrators in respect thereto, the distributor may at its option suspend the deliveries of the motion pictures provided for in this and in each other existing license agreement between the parties hereto and/or terminate this and such other license agreement; and upon such termination the aggregate of the license fees of all motion pictures specified in this and any other such license agreement then not exhibited forthwith shall become due and payable by the exhibitor.

If the distributor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the decision of the award of an Arbitration Board in respect thereto within the number of days specified in Article Sixth of the Standard License Agreement of which this Short Form License Agreement is a part following the name of the city in which such Arbitration Board is located, the exhibitor may at the option of the exhibitor terminate this and any other existing license agreement between the parties hereto by mailing a notice to such effect to the distributor within seven (7) days after such failure or refusal.

Any such termination by either party shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy which the party so terminating may have by reason of any breach by the other party of this or any other existing agreement between the parties.

Each of the parties hereto, without notice to the other, may apply to any Court having jurisdiction to make this agreement to arbitrate a rule or order of such Court.

CHECKING THEATRE RECEIPTS

Indicative of the most recent developments in the field of the checking of theatre receipts in connection with the establishing of returns to the distributor and the exhibitor in percentage playing of motion pictures is Ross Federal Service, Inc., of which Harry A. Ross is president and Claud Saunders general manager. Headquarters are in the Palmolive Building, Chicago, and branches have been established in key cities throughout the United States.

Ross Federal Service, Inc., was chartered under the laws of the State of Illinois and authorized to transact its business in most of the states of the Union. It was organized and established to meet the requirements of parties to percentage playing of pictures and in its operation systematically and authentically to cover ticket sales and admissions to places of entertainment for its clients.

Twenty-one branches have been established to date (May 26, 1931) and the company has in its employ 3,000 field representatives. All personnel is bonded.

Heretofore film distributors in general had maintained in their branch offices a corps of checking representatives whose operations were limited chiefly to local situations, with the cost of covering remote locations a factor. Ross Federal Service has field representatives available in cities and towns far distant from exchange centers.

DEPINET, NED E.: Vice president and general manager of RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc.; b. Erie, Pa., September 9, 1890; e. Erie high school. After being graduated from high school, he found his first job as booker and salesman with Imported Film & Supply Company of New Orleans. In 1910 Imported Film & Supply Company became a part of General Film Company, giving him a broader opportunity to familiarize himself with the marketing of pictures in Southern territory. His success was so pronounced that in 1911 Universal offered him the place of Southern division manager, a position that he filled until 1924, when he was brought to the New York office as one of three sales directors. Along with his other duties, he continued to be the right-hand man of William Oldnow, who for many years had the Universal distributing franchise for the entire South. In the summer of 1926 he went to First National as a member of the sales cabinet organized at that time with the country divided into three territories, East, South and West. Took over the Southern territory and soon brought the sales in that part of the country up to a new high mark. When it was decided to appoint a general sales manager with jurisdiction over all domestic distribution he was chosen. He was a distributor representative at the exhibitor-distributor-producer conference in Chicago. When Pathe was acquired by RKO this year he became an executive of the new company.

DESSEZ, ELIZABETH RICHEY: Writer and lecturer and editor of motion pictures, also director of the educational department of Pathe Pictures; b. and e. in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and Maryland. Her grandfather was John Locke, Company A, First Virginia Cavalry, of the Confederate Army; m. George A. Dessez and left Virginia to make her home in New York City. Did considerable writing for newspapers during her first years in New York and she became actively interested in motion pictures. With the desire to see that her children view suitable pictures when they went to a theatre, she and a friend, also a Virginian and the mother of a family, arranged with the manager of a local motion picture theatre to run children's matinees on Saturday mornings at his theatre. The exhibitor became interested in the scheme and the result was the first successful children's matinee in New York City. Mrs. Dessez found herself in demand as a public speaker and as a result of the successful experiment, George Kleine gave her a place on his staff doing public relations work for the then famous Conquest Pictures, produced by the Edison Company. During the World war Dessez used her knowledge of motion pictures in helping select pictures for the motion picture division of the war work council of the Y. M. C. A. After the war, she became a member of the Pathe organization, going in, really, to edit features. Shortly afterward she was made a director of the educational department. Her work in motion pictures has become international in character with her recent appointment as a member of the League of Nations by the section on intellectual cooperation of the League of Nations in Geneva. H

HALL, RAY L.: Newsreel editor; b. Kentland, Ind.; e. graduate of Indiana University. His early training in news gathering was with the City Press Association in Chicago and later on the staff of the Chicago and Indianapolis papers, establishing an enviable reputation as political writer in the Middle West with daily syndicated first page signed column. Went through news as editorial writer, city editor and managing editor, eventually joining the United Press Association with headquarters in New York. Then joined the International Press Association and covered many of the greatest news events of the times. Detached himself from newspaper work to become editor of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial when that news film was started, with editorial offices in Chicago. Later came to New York and organized and edited the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial; then was active in organization of the Hearst International Newsreel and afterward was placed in charge of technical production of all Hearst screen product. During the war he was called to organize the motion picture activities of the American Red Cross and also served as production manager of the division of films of the committee on public information. Following the war he organized the Screen Telegraph, released by Mutual, and when that company consolidated with another, organized and edited Kinetograms. HAMMONS, E. W.: President, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.; b. Winona, Miss., 1882; e. Winona, Fort Smith, Ark., Dallas, Texas, and New York City.

In a secretarial capacity he served, successively, the customs agent of the Mexican National Railways with offices at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, the building commissioner of the New York City Department of Buildings, and L. Ranlett of Marshall, Spader & Company, New York stock brokers. Real estate next claimed his interest and he connected with Dean Alvord and Company, whom he left to take the managerial reins of Woodmere Realty Company, thence to the real estate department of United States and Mexican Trust Company. This invaluable experience which he gained here in organizing building and development companies was reflected in his subsequent ventures in the motion picture. After a brief period of experimentation with short films of strictly an educational nature, he launched a campaign to release short comedy and novelty pictures through a special national distributor organization. Unable to interest American capital, he appealed to the great Hudson's Bay Company in England, where he succeeded in getting the financial backing he was seeking, and today he has a company producing and distributing almost every conceivable type of short subject.

HANCOCK, HERBERT E.: Member of editorial board of Fox Hearst Corporation; b. London, England, August 31, 1885; e. Canterbury College. HAYS, WILL H.: President Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.; b. Sullivan, Ind., November 5, 1873; p. Mary Cain and John T. Hays; non-professionals; e. bachelor of arts degree in 1900, master of arts degree in 1904 from Wabash College and later a doctor of laws degree from Mt. Union College. On his twenty-first birthday was admitted to the Indiana bar, later becoming a member of his father's law firm, known for two generations as the firm of Hays & Hays, and served as city attorney in Sullivan. Shortly after beginning the practice of law became interested in politics. Accepted the chairmanship of the Republican County Committee for Sullivan county and by successive stages in the state organization, he became chairman of the Republican central committee of Indiana in 1914. During the war was chairman of the Indiana state council of defense. In February, 1918, became chairman of the Republican National Committee. Following the election of President Harding, he was appointed postmaster general of the United States, resigning in 1922 to become president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

As postmaster general, he quickly raised the postal service to a high level of efficiency. Furthered the air mail service, waged a relentless war on mail bandits by arming employees and placing Marines on trains, and succeeded in humanizing the postal department by a plan of making every employee a "partner in service." Under his guidance, many changes have been brought about in the motion picture industry. By self government of the industry at the source of production, new high artistic and moral standards have been established. Not only do producers now exercise judgment in selection of screen material through operation of a co-operative study of hooks and plays which have possible objectionable subject matter, but a studio relations committee constantly taking to the men and women in the studios accurate reports, advice and suggestions from authoritative individuals and groups in public. Through a committee on public relations, which has now grown into a department of public relations, goodwill has been promoted everywhere. This department disseminates not only accurate and reliable information regarding the industry's purposes and accomplishments, but also serves as a channel through which helpful suggestions are received from the interested public and passed on to the studios.

Much of his attention has been directed toward establishment of finer relationships with foreign governments and with the foreign film industries. Believing that the screen is one of the most powerful and influential forces extant for promotion of goodwill between men and women and nations, he has encouraged a higher sense of responsibility in depiction of foreign scenes and persons, so that now care is taken to see that nationals of any one country are truthfully and sympathetically introduced to nationals of every other country. Taking "confidence and cooperation" as a basic policy in this industry, he has helped bring to all branches a deep and conscientious responsibility for proper guidance of the motion picture. Under his leadership have been developed also the Film Boards of Trade, special educational or pedagogic films, surgical pictures and films for use in churches, a free casting bureau for extras, and special Saturday morning performances of pictures for children encouraged.

Higher standards in all forms of publicity and advertising have won wide recognition by publishers and critics. By raising its standards, exercising its freedom with proper restraint, and establishing itself more firmly in the hearts of the people, under his leadership, the industry since 1922 has been able to go to higher levels of artistry with the best wishes and applause of the public at large.

He has been active also in professional and social enterprises. Is vice president of the Peoples National Bank and Trust Co. of Sullivan, Ind.; director, Continental Baking Corp., Fletcher American Co., Indianapolis, Ind., Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. Co., Boys Club Federation; vice president, Roosevelt Memorial Association; trustee, Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men; member, National Council of Boy Scouts of America, Citizens Committee of Salvation Army, American Green Cross, American and Indiana State Bar Associations, National Institute for Social Science, Academy of Political Science, Phi Delta Theta (president for Indiana six years; national president, 1920-22); chairman, coordinating committee, American Red Cross and Near East Relief, by appointment of President Harding, October, 1918; colonel, O. R. C. elder, Presbyterian Church; appointed chairman of laymen committee, Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation, May 17, 1923.

KENT, SIDNEY R.: General manager and member of board of directors of Paramount Public Corporation; b. Lincoln, Neb., and at age of 14, just after he had finished grammar school, got his first job stoking boilers in a greenhouse at $5 a week. From this humble beginning he has developed a business career which is one of the most strikingly successful ones in the annals of the picture industry. Before he was 20 years old he had pushed up in Wyoming and was occupying a responsible position with Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. He was one of an engineering company and he and five other men were sole inhabitants of 36 miles of desolate country. They built their own roads and pipelines, established camps, and eventually opened up territory to civilization and business activity. In 1912 he went to the Pacific Coast with the American Druggists' Syndicate. Shortly afterwards he returned East where he became a salesman at $50 a week. Three months later he was the company's assistant sales manager, then assistant to the president and for three and one-half years he was virtually in charge of the entire business. A friend talked to him enthusiastically of the motion picture business. He liked its prospects and cast his lot with the films with the old Vitagraph Company. It was not long after that General Film Company was indicted under the Sherman Law and buried under judgments aggregating $25,000,000. Frank Hitchcock had the job of unravelling the tangle and he called Sidney Kent to help him. The job was cleaned up and Kent stepped into the office of Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players, and sold his services, but not at a price. That was to be determined if and when he made good. He went to work in the company's administration bureau, and at the end of eight months was getting $250 a week. His first work in the distribution department, was as special district manager of the territory which included the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines offices, which position he held until May, 1919, when he was called to the home office to become general sales manager. On January 8, 1921, Zukor appointed him general manager of distribution and a year later he was elected to the company's board of directors. In 1926 he was named general manager.

W

WARNER, ALBERT: Vice president and treasurer of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and treasurer of Vitaphone Corporation; major in R. O. T. C.; b. Baltimore, Md.; e. in that city. As did the other brothers, Albert found work between school hours and thus received his first training in business. Leaving school he went to work with Swift and Company, the packers, and, for once and the only time, he was a competitor with his brother, Harry, who was with Armour and Company. Each of the Warner boys had a full share in making Warner success. When they opened their first theatre in Newcastle, Pa., Albert was ticket seller and looked after the finances. It also fell to his lot to be the salesman of the firm when the Warner brothers opened their film exchange. He then found his experience with Swift valuable. Again, when Warner Features was established, it was Albert who handled the sales. When the branch exchange was opened at Cleveland, Albert took charge of it. When the Warner firm fell on hard times and, for a period, the brothers had to separate, Albert took a position as film salesman with other firms and thus filled in the period until the brothers came together to produce "My Four Years in Germany." Here again his talent as salesman stood him in good stead. While the other members of the firm were getting the picture out, Albert applied high pressure methods and sold it before it was even finished. The success of "My Four Years in Germany" having once more put Warner Bros. on their feet, Albert took direct charge of the finances of the firm. It was no easy job, either, for while they were doing excellent business they were usually in need of ready money. It was the job of Albert to make it go as far as possible. In course of time the business of Warner Bros. had grown to such proportions it was necessary to organize Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. This gave the firm an opportunity to issue stock, the returns of which provided financial sinews of war for their ventures. It was under this banner that Warner Bros. developed the Vitaphone talking pictures. It was Albert who bore the anxious and heavy burden of having to make both ends meet. In spite of their desperate plight they did make ends meet and Albert stayed on the job every hour of the day until there was a clear road ahead. He continues to occupy his post as guardian of the treasury, now that success has come to Warner Bros., but aside from that takes a very direct interest in the selling of the business, which was his first work.

WARNER, HARRY M.: President, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; b. in Russia; when but 6 years of age was brought to this country and settled in Baltimore; e. in that city. Opened up a bicycle shop in Youngstown, Ohio, early in 1900 when the bicycle craze was at its height. Having observed the new invention, motion pictures, the Warner brothers, under the leadership of Harry, determined to open a show of their own. After inspecting surrounding territory, Newcastle, Pa., was selected and they opened their first theatre, The Castle, in 1903. Always looking ahead the Warner brothers saw an opportunity for branching out in the film business. Under the executive head of Harry Warner they opened film exchange at Pittsburgh to supply theatres with product. Again they were successful and eventually opened branches in nearby towns. Harry, as usual, was the head of the business, each of the other brothers having his own share in the work. With that quality which has marked the Warner brothers' history from the start, Harry saw an opportunity to further extend their operations. They went into market and bought feature pictures which were sold under the title Warner Features. As a result Warner Features became active competitors and had marked success. In course of time, owing to conditions beyond their own control, the Warners were compelled to abandon both their exchanges and Warner Features. Harry and his brothers went separate ways for the first time in many years, but this did not last for long. Again under the executive direction of Harry, the brothers joined together to produce James W. Gerard's book, "My Four Years in Germany," as a picture. The success of this production marked their first step to final success. During the development period of Vitaphone talking pictures as through the whole history of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Harry was the executive head of the firm, position he continues to hold. He is a keen competitor, game loser, and believes the shortest distance between two points is a direct line and never hesitates so to express himself.

WEBB, STUART WESTON: Executive, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; b. Worcester, Mass., November 27, 1883; p. Stephen Weston and Martha Stephenson Boyden Webb; e. Brookline high school, Harvard University, A. B. With City Trust Company in Boston, October, 1905; then assistant secretary City Trust Company, in 1909; later assistant secretary, Old Colony Trust Company, 1912, also treasurer of Eastern Manufacturing Company; in 1914, vice-president, Old Colony Trust Company; chairman of board, Eastern Manufacturing Company, 1916; in 1919 was former Bond and Goodwin; 1922 chairman and president, Eastern Manufacturing Company.

WEEKS, GEORGE W.: Vice president and general manager of Sono Art-World Wide Pictures, Inc.; b. Ann Arbor, Mich.; e. Ann Arbor, Mich. Started business career as director of advertising campaigns in Detroit; entered motion picture industry in 1910 with John E. Kunsky as supervisor of Kunsky theatres and while with Kunsky bought the first two Paramount pictures ever released. Leaving Kunsky he joined General Film Company as salesman, later becoming a Universal franchise holder for Michigan and then a member of the board of directors of Metro franchise holders in that state. Joined Paramount as salesman in the Detroit office. Then to general manager of Famous Lasky Film Service, Ltd., and finally called to the home office and appointed general manager of distribution, holding that position until becoming Eastern representative of Christie Film Company; subsequently formed and became president and general manager of Sono-Art Productions, Inc., though maintaining his former affiliations.

WEISS, ADOLPH: Treasurer of Weiss Bros. Art-class Pictures Corporation, born in New York City. Established himself in the early days in the Welshach Lamp & Fixture business with a partner by the name of Samuel Goldhor at 3rd Avenue and 111th Street. Not finding this sufficient to occupy his time, he branched out into a new line of endeavor, the phonograph business. After acquiring the Edison and Victor franchises he opened up several retail stores in which to handle the phonograph and talking machine lines. He took both his brothers, Max and Louis, to work in these stores and gave them a general knowledge and training in this business, both brothers becoming partners. Subsequently he bought out the talking machine department of Western Electric Company and conducted the Victor Jobbing Agency at 50th 9th Street, Philadelphia, he having acquired the exclusive franchise for the handling of the entire Victor talking machine product for the Philadelphia territory. Just about the time he wanted to retire from the phonograph field, there loomed a great opportunity in the motion picture field. He consequently opened up a little store theatre with his brothers at Avenue A and 4th Street and later on developed a chain of morning picture theatres which he and his brothers operated very successfully for a great many years, later branching out into the producing field. For the past 15 years he has been connected with his brothers Louis and Max in the production end of the film business, having operated studios in New York and Hollywood. He is still treasurer of Artclass Pictures Corporation, is interested in and acting as president of the Hillcrest Golf Club in Jamaica and is also president of Hillcrest Manor and Utopia Park Villas in Flushing.

WEISS, LOUIS: Vice president of Weiss Bros. Artclass Pictures Corporation. Born in New York City. When he finished his schooling, he started with his brother, Adolph, in the Welsbach Lamp & Fixture line, later on taking over the management of phonograph stores in Philadelphia and New York. After spending several years in the phonograph business, he continued with his brothers in the management and operation of several phonograph and talking machine stores, later on becoming the manager of moving picture theatres owned and controlled by Weiss Bros. He also operated several exchanges and for the past 15 years has been engaged actively as vice president and production manager of the various pictures made and distributed by Weiss Bros. Artclass Pictures Corporation. He also handled the distribution of hundreds of pictures—short subjects, serials and features—produced by his own companies. Was general manager of the DeForest Studios for one year. He is busily occupied at the present time lining up story material and production plans for the new Banner 1931-32 program consisting of six Standard Star features and six Standard Supreme features, possibly eight outdoor Epics and an animal serial. In Artclass he is in charge of production as well as sales. Is also interested with his brothers in the Hillcrest Golf Club as well as the other Jamaica and Flushing properties controlled by Weiss Bros.

WEISS, MAX: President of Artclass Pictures Corp. Born in New York City. After leaving high school he became associated with his brother in conducting the Welsbach Lamp & Fixture business and later on associated with Weiss Bros. Artclass Pictures Corporation of several phonograph stores owned and controlled by his brother, Adolph. Later on he became actively engaged in the operation of a chain of 15 moving picture theatres throughout greater New York, Jersey and Long Island. Conducted the Fulton theatre in Hempstead, L. I., running vaudeville, stock and motion pictures for many years. Has been actively engaged in the production and distribution end of the motion picture business for the past 15 years. Has handled domestic as well as all of the foreign business of Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation, having made ten trips abroad, each time disposing of all the Artclass product. At present is busy on the new 1931-32 line up of Artclass Pictures. Is also acting as treasurer of the Hillcrest Golf Club in Jamaica and Hillcrest Manor and Utopia Park Villas property in Flushing.

WHITE, CLINTON M.: Business manager, Amer-Anglo Corporation; entered motion picture industry in August, 1912, as special representative of General Film Company and in December of that year was sent to Montreal, Canada, as branch manager of the company's exchange in that city. In May, 1914, he returned to the United States as assistant general manager of Gaumont Company at Flushing, Long Island. In 1920 he joined the sales department of Arrow Film Corporation and was with that organization until 1922, at which time he left the film business until 1927. He is now associated with Amer-Anglo Corporation.

ZUKOR, ADOLPH: President of Paramount Public Corporation; b. Riese, Hunza, January 7, 1873; p. Jacob and Hannah Zukor; m. 1897; has two children. At the age of 16 he emigrated to this country, where he became a sweeper in a fur store in New York City. Worked hard, studied diligently and advanced rapidly—an advance considerably hastened financially by his invention of a patented fur clasp. In 1892 he went to Chicago, where he became successful in the fur trade. Returned to New York in 1901 and in 1903 ventured with the late Marcus Loew in the penny arcade, a theatrical novelty then much in vogue. This was the foundation of the Marcus Loew Enterprises, of which Loew became the president and Zukor treasurer. In 1912 Zukor decided to form Famous Players Film Company. In the formation of this company he had the services of Daniel Frohman, one of the few leaders of the legitimate theatre who recognized the artistic possibilities of the screen. The first production of the new company was Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth." This was followed by James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and these two were the first two feature pictures of multiple-reel length produced. The reception accorded these pictures by the public encouraged other producers to follow Zukor's example and in 1913 Jesse L. Lasky and other associates organized Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, with similar policy producing multiple-reel photoplays based on wellknown plays and enacted by wellknown players. In 1916, Zukor's company, Famous Players Film Company, and Jesse L. Lasky's Feature Play Company combined under the name of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. At the same time, to insure the stability of the distribution outlet for the company's productions, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation absorbed Paramount Pictures Corporation, a distribution and sales organization. Thus Famous Players-Lasky Corporation not only produced but also sold its own pictures. Under Zukor's management and guidance some of the most famous stars of the screen were developed. Erected theatres in the key cities of the country. This led eventually to the establishment, in 1926, of Public Theatres Corporation, subsidiary of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In 1927 Famous Players-Lasky changed its corporation name to Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation and in 1930 to Paramount Public Corporation. Today Paramount, through its subsidiary, owns a large number of theatres both in this country and abroad. The stock of Zukor's company was the first motion picture stock to be traded in on the New York Stock Exchange.

Exhibition

Attendance at motion picture theatres reaches huge total of 300,000,000 per week—Listing of theatre circuits, small and large, is presented, as well as useful information on two thousand key theatres of the United States—Of special service is the detailed presentation of construction costs of large and small theatres.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION COSTS

What it costs to construct the motion picture theatre of three general types, presented in convenient table form for comparative purposes. These statistics are not intended to be absolute, since the range of variation from theatre to theatre in each class is wide enough to have considerable effect upon any general treatment of construction and operation costs. The tables below show, however, such costs as they are likely to be encountered in typical examples of the classes of theatres indicated. It should also be noted that in each case, the theatre represented is of strictly modern character in construction and facilities.

CLASS I.—THEATRE SEATING 800 IN A SMALL CITY

Structural steel	$ 2,000.00
Electrical work and fixtures.....	7,000.00
Excavating	300.00
Rock, sand, gravel, etc.....*	1,500.00*
Lumber, cement, plaster.....	12,000.00*
Brick	4,000.00
Roofing	400.00*
Ornamental tile work.....	1,000.00*
Insulating material	300.00
Heating and ventilating.....	2,500.00
Plumbing and fixtures.....	3,000.00
General painting	900.00
Decorative painting	1,500.00*
Construction insurance	600.00
Sheet metal work.....	1,000.00
Finish hardware	1,500.00
Ornamental iron work.....	500.00*
Doors, windows, general hardware.....	5,000.00
Labor and supervision.....	20,000.00
Total cost (minus architect's fee).....	$65,000.00†

*The cost of items of this character is greatly influenced by the style of architecture and the materials chosen to carry it out, by local conditions and by the distance of the site from the source of material.

†Attractive theatres of this size have been built for half this amount, however, by reducing considerably the facilities that the modern theatre usually possesses and by employing only the plainest of decorative treatments.

CLASS II.—THEATRE SEATING 1,500 IN METROPOLITAN NEIGHBORHOOD OR BUSINESS SECTION OF MEDIUM-SIZED CITY

Excavating	$ 4,000.00
Sheathing	700.00
Concrete	15,000.00
Formwork	8,000.00
Structural steel and reinforcing.....	4,000.00
Brick	12,000.00
Backup tile	8,000.00
Erecting and carting (including labor).....	20,000.00
Ornamental iron work.....	3,000.00
Partitions (tile or gypsum).....	2,000.00
Plastic ornamentation (plaster and terra cotta).....	30,000.00*
Roofing	3,000.00
Sheet metal work.....	2,000.00
Windows and doors, general hardware.....	12,000.00
Wood floors, including labor.....	900.00
Ground labor	900.00
Miscellaneous lumber, including labor.....	2,000.00
Finish hardware	1,500.00
Glass and glazing.....	1,000.00
Marble, terrazzo and tile work.....	4,000.00
General painting	1,000.00
Decorative painting	5,000.00
Heating and ventilating.....	20,000.00
Plumbing and gas, including fixtures.....	10,000.00
Electrical work and fixtures.....	30,000.00
Total cost (minus architect's fee).....	$200,000.00

CLASS III.—THEATRE OF METROPOLITAN "DELUXE" TYPE SEATING 3,500

(Note. The following data covers construction of a building housing both theatre and office and store space, according to the arrangement commonly necessary for the profitable operation of theatres of this magnificence. Of the total cost, the theatre portion proper may be said to represent 40 per cent.)

Excavation and foundations.....	$ 150,000.00
Steel	300,000.00
Steel erection	80,000.00
Concrete	200,000.00
Tile partitions	70,000.00
Plastering	400,000.00
Ornamental iron work.....	82,000.00
Heating and ventilating.....	450,000.00
Stage rigging	60,000.00
Cement finish	65,000.00
Marble, terrazzo and tile work.....	200,000.00
Electrical work and fixtures.....	230,000.00
Hardware	20,000.00

What is the representative cost, in detail, of constructing a large theatre of the first class? A small theatre? What is the normal outlay for operation of a theatre?—The text and status of the proposed new standard exhibition contract—World theatres by nations, circuits in the United States—Two thousand key theatres.

SOUND IN BRITAIN

London—Nearly three-fourths of the theatres in the British Isles were wired for talkers by April 1, 1931, according to a census completed by Western Electric and showing a rapid growth to a total of 5,079 motion picture theatres in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. This figure included those open only once a week. There were also 220 theatres in construction. Of the 5,079 houses, averaging one to each square mile, 3,395 were wired for talkers, 1,265 of them with Western Electric equipment. Ireland had 286 theatres, 148 of them wired and 31 by Western Electric; Scotland 616, with 342 wired, 127 by Western Electric; Wales 346, with 222 wired and 62 by that company; and England 3,831, with Western Electric in 1,045 of the 2,683 sound-equipped. Under construction in Ireland were seven, with 7 in Wales, 26 in Scotland and 180 in England.

PROTECTION

Establishment of zoning schedules on a cooperative basis first was undertaken in May, 1930, when effort was made by distributors, affiliated and independent theatre owners to agree upon protection schedules at Los Angeles.

There was then pending a criminal conspiracy action against Fox West Coast Theatres, its affiliates and several distributors, alleging that the protection granted the circuit amounted to a "freeze-out" of independents and was illegal under the antitrust laws. At the time, meetings were arranged between distributors and theatre owners to draft an agreement covering protection in the territory.

Protection schedules agreed to by all parties concerned would constitute a legal form of agreement which would stand in court, it was felt, hence the plan for national zoning. In addition, distributors wanted definite commitments in the matter of playdates, assuring their revenue return at a given time, through the establishment of dates on films' availability.

The Los Angeles agreement was the forerunner of others in a systematic plan to zone the entire country. Chicago, long a center of extended protection, was the second territory chosen for institution of protection schedules. A series of meetings held there failed to produce any agreement, affiliated and independent theatres being far apart in their demands.

Following this, meetings were held in a number of key cities throughout the country with varying results. Agreements were made tentatively in a number of cities, but Allied States Association took a stand opposing any protection agreements. This resulted in postponement of zoning plans and withdrawal of independent exhibitors from the continuing committee at Los Angeles, as the exhibitor body in that zone is a unit of Allied.

Now, the Allied organization is assembling data from its members, preparatory to a court fight on the issue of extended protection.

CONTRACT

[Exhibition Section]

[The text of the proposed new standard exhibition contract will be found on page 316, in the section entitled Distribution.]

Whether the motion picture industry is to have a standard form of licensing agreement, sanctioned by exhibitors and distributors, is a matter that the United States government must decide. Distributors and exhibitors are in accord on a proposed new form of contract, but it will not be put into effect until the Department of Justice gives its formal approval upon the legality of the contract form. Efforts now are underway by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to obtain the Government's stamp of approval on the proposed new contract.

The proposed new standard form of agreement was adopted by distributors and exhibitors after several months of negotiations. The now-famous Thacher decree had outlawed the arbitration agreement of the old uniform contract, undermining the effectiveness of that form of agreement drafted as a result of the Trade Practice Conference in 1927.

AVERAGE ADMISSIONS AS AGAINST AVERAGE RECEIPTS. Above are the box office gauges of 20 cities, the black in each gauge representing the average admission price per seat; the white the average receipts per seat. Merely as an example let New York's 10 per cent on average admissions represent 10 cents. This would bring the average intake per seat to almost $2.10, a higher proportionate average than prevails in any other city, says Motion Picture Herald.

With the industry confronted by a state of chaos, as a result of the Thacher decree, S. R. Kent, vice president and general manager of Paramount, broke the impasse November 20, 1929, when he invited the MPTOA and Allied States Association to meet with distributors to draft a new standard form of agreement.

Under the Kent proposal distributors, the MPTOA and Allied each named a committee of five members to work on the new draft. The first meeting of the 5-5-5 committee was held December 10, 1929, in New York. After a series of meetings, a long adjournment was taken to enable distributors' attorneys to consider the legal phase of the contract discussions. The Thacher decree had caused misgivings as to the legality of any form of agreement adopted in concert and it was to avoid entanglements that the delay was insisted upon.

Average theatre grosses for the first three months of 1931 showed an increase of from 5 per cent to 25 per cent over average grosses for the last 30 weeks of 1930. In only three of the 20 cities from which receipts were obtained was a decline noted, these three being Des Moines, Minneapolis and Portland. In the above chart the white uprights indicate the average gross for the last 30 weeks of 1930, while the black shows the average gross for the first three months of this year. The survey was made by Motion Picture Herald.

AVERAGE SEAT GROSSES—The broken line at 100 per cent represents average weekly box office receipts per seat in 20 cities for 23 weeks period from October 4, 1930, to March 7, 1931. The vertical lines represent average weekly box office receipts per seat in each of the 20 cities for same period.

Meanwhile, all of the various distributors were adopting their individual forms of contract, most of them reverting to the advance deposit system. Individual drafting of contracts, it was pointed out, avoided the aspects of illegality in view of the Thatcher decree.

Meetings on the contract were resumed in New York April 1, 1930, with distributors insisting that as many exhibitors as possible be asked to contribute suggestions on the form of agreement. Under the plan, the completed document was to be submitted to the two exhibitor organizations for ratification, as well as to the distributor unit, and then submitted individually to all exhibitors. It was proposed to have one master contract, copy of which would be retained by all exhibitors, and a short form of agreement covering the playing arrangement.

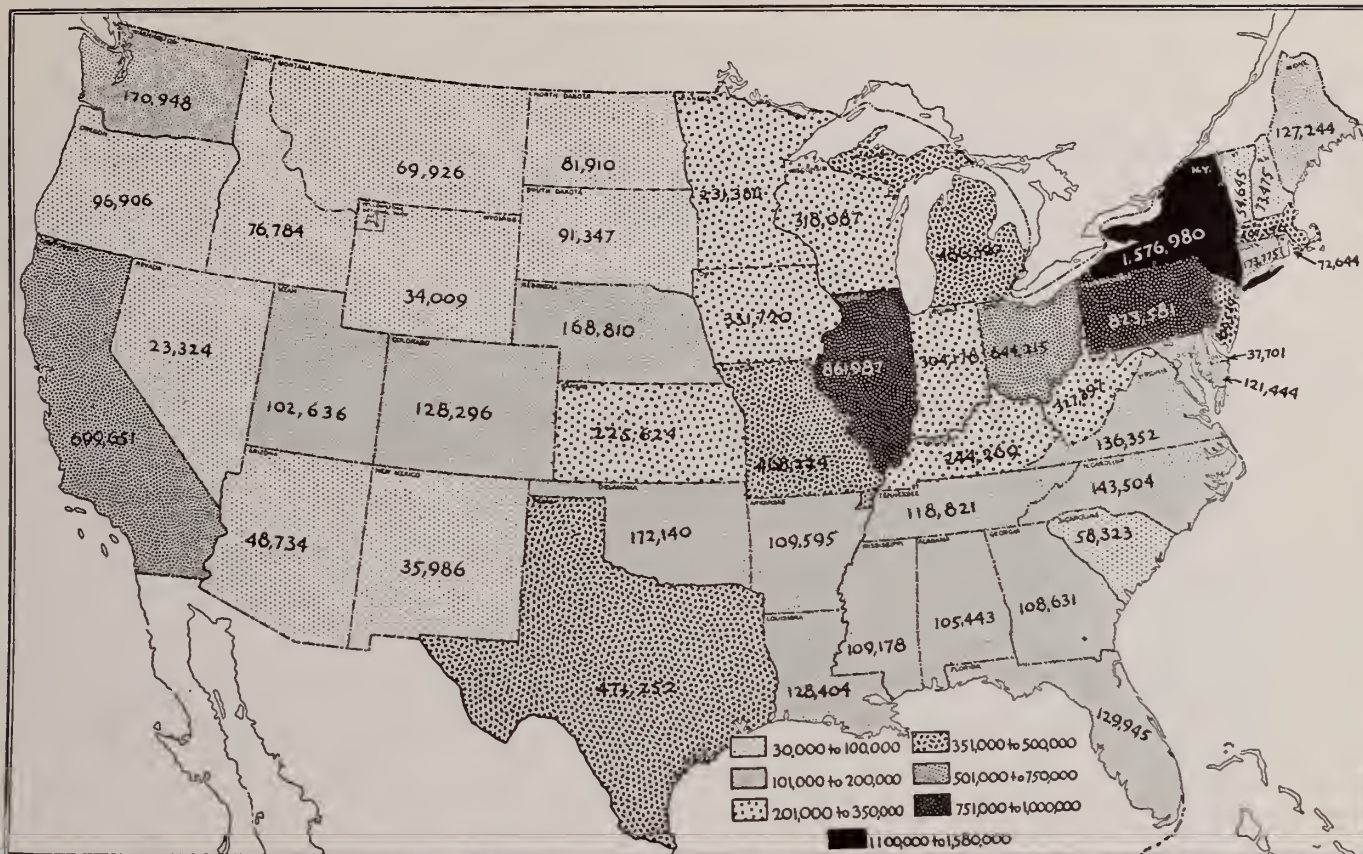

Throughout the next two months, a series of meetings was held by subcommittees composed of three members of the organizations. The contract was dissected and rewritten, the former standard contract serving as a groundwork for the new form of agreement.

After the 3-3-3 conferences had reached a temporary agreement, the 5-5-5 conferences were resumed June 30 at Atlantic City. After four days of deliberations, the committees agreed upon a tentative draft, details of which, including the proposed rules of the new "moral" arbitration system, were to be worked out by Gabriel L. Hess of the Hays office and Abram F. Myers, president of Allied. A series of meetings was held and a set of rules tentatively agreed to.

Both the MPTOA and Allied States Association have agreed to the proposed new form of contract now awaiting Government approval before going into effect. There is little likelihood that the contract will become effective prior to the 1932-33 selling season.

Total seating capacity of the 21,284 sound and silent theatrical accounts listed on the books of distributors now reaches 12,142,761, representing one seat for every ten persons in the United States.

The average seating capacity of all accounts is 571, although averages for first and second runs reach well over 1,500 seats.

South Carolina is the most undersated state in the country, having but one seat for every 29 persons. Alabama is a close runner-up with 25 for every theatre seat, while North Carolina is third, having a seat for every 22 inhabitants. Other southern states follow closely in this category, indicating the South to be the most undersated geographical division of the U. S.

Other sections of the country run more or less to average, with Nevada in top place for overseating, having only one seat for every three persons. Utah has four for every seat and West Virginia five.

New York, California, Illinois and New Jersey each with eight persons per seat, are all below the national average.

Although all of the 21,284 accounts listed on the books of distributors are not in operation, nor are they all regular theatre structures (some are lodge halls, etc.), nevertheless, each is considered a theatrical account by major companies. They pay regular rental charges when operating.

Actual number of theatres (theatre buildings) is said to range between 14,000 and 18,000.

New York leads in the total number of accounts, having 1,833 with Illinois runner-up with 1,396 accounts. District of Columbia, with 48, and Delaware, 66, are, as usual, at the bottom of the list.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Four hundred and eighty-three cities in 17 states, and others in Canada have daylight saving from April to September. The total has been considerably reduced under 1930 due to vigorous battles staged by exhibitors and others in amusement fields who are hit the worst of any branch of business.

States and towns in which daylight saving time was used in 1931 included the following:

Wilmington DELAWARE

CONNECTICUT

Notwithstanding the attempt of rural legislators to prohibit the observance of Daylight Saving by the passage of law making it an offense to show other than Eastern Standard Time on clocks or timepieces publicly displayed, Daylight Saving is observed by banks, offices, stores and factories in the following places:

Ansonia New Haven
 Bethel New London
 Bridgeport New Milford
 Bristol Norwalk
 Danbury Norwich
 Danielson Rockville
 Darien South Manchester
 Derby South Norwalk
 Greenwich Southington

Has a State law, similar to that of Connecticut, prohibiting the observance of other than Eastern Standard Time. Notwithstanding this measure, Daylight Saving Time is observed in the following cities and towns:

Auburn Orchard Beach
 Bath Portland
 Belfast Saco
 Biddeford Sanford
 Brunswick Spring Vale
 Calais Waterville
 Lewiston

Augusta and Bangor. It is reported, may observe Daylight Saving Time in 1931.

BRITISH QUOTA

London—The British quota law now enters its fourth year, automatically increasing to 12 3/8%.

The first year, ended March 31, 1929, saw a 7 1/2% quota. In 1930, the law automatically raised the figure to 10%. Next year, the current 12 1/2% regulation advances to 15%, the permanent figure.

The new figure, and next year's large percentage, were forcing a number of American companies to establish production units in England to meet quota requirements. Approximately 86 British made talkers must be released by English distributors this season.

DARK THEATRES

Distributors are losing a minimum of $10,000,000 annually in rentals because of the darkened condition of 5,000 U. S. theatres which were forced to close due to owners' inability to finance sound installations, a survey in February disclosed.

Although at least 10,000 houses now are dark in the U. S., it is conservatively estimated that 5,000 of this group are in fit condition to operate.

The $10,000,000 figure is arrived at on the basis of all houses operating on an average of three times weekly and making an average expenditure of $12 for each complete show. The weekly figure approximates $180,000.

SOUND IN AUSTRALIA

With a total of 837 theatres wired in Australia and New Zealand, the sound investment in both British possessions reached $12,500,000 in February, 1931. Exhibitors in both countries were paying a service fee approximating $550,000.

Australia had 505 film-and-disc and 136 disc devices; in New Zealand, 167 were dual systems, and 29 disc only.

Inter-related Subjects

Developments in the field of public relations pass in review —The three outstanding legal decisions of the past twelve months are presented in detail —Activities in the field of public relations take on added importance—Deaths of the year — The year's developments are reviewed by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

MPPDA ACTIVITIES

Codes governing production and advertising are considered by Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as one of the most important developments of its activities during 1930.

The Production Code went into effect on February 17, 1930, and the Advertising Code on June 6, 1930. Each is considered a complement of the other and each was subscribed to by the major producing and distributing organizations in the industry. The chief purposes of both codes are outlined in the following general principles:

Motion picture producers recognize the high trust and confidence which have been placed in them by the people of the world and which have made motion pictures a universal form of entertainment.

They recognize their responsibility to the public because of this trust and because entertainment and art are important influences in the life of a nation.

Hence, though regarding motion pictures primarily as entertainment without any explicit purpose of teaching or propaganda, they knew that the motion picture within its own field of entertainment may be directly responsible for spiritual or moral progress, for higher types of social life, and for much correct thinking.

During the rapid transition from silent to talking pictures they have realized the necessity and the opportunity of subscribing to a Code to govern the production of talking pictures and of reacknowledging this responsibility.

On their part, they ask from the public and from public leaders a sympathetic understanding of their purposes and problems and a spirit of cooperation that will allow them the freedom and opportunity necessary to bring the motion picture to a still higher level of wholesome entertainment for all the people.

1. No picture shall be produced which will lower the moral standards of those who see it. Hence the sympathy of the audience should never be thrown to the side of crime, wrongdoing, evil or sin.

2. Correct standards of life, subject only to the requirements of drama and entertainment, shall be presented.

3. Law, natural or human, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation.

With the universal acceptance of the talking motion picture, the producers deemed it wise and necessary to adopt a new and amplified code of principles to guide the production of this new form of entertainment.

It is appropriate that those responsible for the advertising of motion pictures should take steps to emphasize their kindred purposes, and to make certain that motion picture advertising shall reflect the same high ideals and aims which inspired the new code for production.

Therefore, to make our maximum contribution to the progress of the motion picture medium, help it fulfill its obligation and develops its complete community value, the advertising men of the industry hereby subscribe to a Code for Motion Picture Advertising.

Studio Relations Committee

The Studio Relations Committee represents another important work of the Hays organization. For four years now, it has functioned as an advisory body to the industry on production detail that contains controversial aspects.

Composed of a representative from each one of the studios and a representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, this group considers picture themes and their prospective treatment in terms of the public acclaim or criticism which any similar picture situation has experienced in the past. The complete resources of the industry for gathering such public reaction—the association's open door policy—opinions of the press—the popularity of pictures as expressed in patronage—contacts of the industry's personnel throughout the world—are available to and utilized by the Studio Relations Committee in the determination of what entertainment the world wants from the motion picture and how that may be supplied with a minimum of offense to the most cosmopolitan audience enjoyed by any medium of human expression. The four years' experience of this committee largely supplied the basic principles around which the new production code was formulated and the functioning of this important organization will be simplified and aided by the code.

The association also serves as a clearing house of information, available to the industry and public alike, on motion picture subjects.

Through the Public Relations Department the industry may make contact with public groups whenever a company wishes their cooperation in publicity or exploitation on pictures they have approved. The organizations, on their own initiative, have worked out methods of approach to their membership which have proved increasingly effective at the box office. During the past year some twenty pictures have gone through this formula of cooperation with good results. Public and industry profit through this contact with potential theatre audiences otherwise unapproachable.

Previewing of Pictures

An immediate source of public reaction to current pictures is available from the various public organizations, whose combined membership totals many millions, reviewing pictures at Hollywood before their release. The objective of these groups is twofold. They wish first to furnish their membership with advance and accurate information relevant to their interest in pictures. They believe that their exploitation and support of approved pictures is the most effective program for increasing the number of wholesome and socially constructed motion pictures.

The following have previewing committees:

Boy Scouts of America
General Federation of Women's Clubs
International Federation of Catholic Alumnae
Los Angeles Branch American Association of University Women
Los Angeles Tenth District California Congress of Parents and Teachers National Society Daughters of American Revolution
Young Men's Christian Association.

Previewing is done at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. To make the second part of their program effective, these groups are distributing their preview reports widely, not limiting distribution entirely to their membership, over the air and through the press.

At the request of these groups, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, formerly president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, a member of the Studio Relations Committee, organized a study course in motion picture appreciation. Lectures were delivered by prominent industry people. Information relative to the previewing service and study course may be obtained from Mrs. Winter, address 5504 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, California.

Pictures in Schools

Forty per cent of all motion pictures screened in 517 primary and secondary schools throughout the country embrace social science subjects, it is revealed by E. I. Way, chief, Industrial and Educational Section of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Having the cooperation of bureaus of education, teachers, county and state school superintendents and commercial organizations, Way conducted a survey of film activities in elementary, junior and senior high schools.

Although the number of schools using films in regular instructional activities has grown in recent years, authorities admit that progress was hampered tremendously with the switch from silent to sound. Majority of the 517 educational institutions embraced in the current survey were found to be lacking sound equipment.

The percentage of showings in connection with curricular and extra curricular activities was 73 and 27, respectively, in a total of 44,186 showings reported by the 517 schools. Following social science in popularity was natural science, represented by 26 of the showings. The fact that 66 per cent of the showings was in these two subjects reflects the greater abundance of films that are available in these fields.

Five other subject fields represent about 25 per cent of the total, including physical education, manual and industrial arts, home economics, English and commercial. Ten other subjects are divided among the remaining 9 per cent, with the lowest seven having negligible distribution.

Thirty-three per cent of the showings were given in connection with curricular work in the social sciences. Approximately 20 per cent of the curricular showings was in natural sciences. For extra curricular purposes films in natural sciences enjoyed the greatest popularity, with titles in social science running a close second.

More than 40 per cent of the total 44,186 showings was in elementary schools, 27 per cent was in junior high and 32 per cent in senior high schools. The low figure for junior institutions is attributed to the fact that a large number of communities do not have junior high schools.

The most popular subjects in elementary and junior schools were those relating to social sciences, while high school attendants prefer subjects relating to natural sciences.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

The public relations program of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America necessarily includes all the functions and objectives of such a service in a business that is not, at the same time, an art, a medium of human expression with all that entails and a purveyor of entertainment. It supplies an information service for the entire industry, making available data about pictures, players, employment opportunities, and general information about the industry, referring technical queries to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences or the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It receives and investigates the type of complaints to which all businesses are heir and endeavors to meet them to the end of preserving the good-will of the public, the industry's principal asset.

The fact that motion pictures are a non-standardized constantly changing product and that they are assumed, rightly, to have an influence on the thinking and social conduct not only of individuals but of whole populations, in the first instance makes any "fixed" public relations policy impractical, while the character of the merchandise—so to speak—makes its subject to criticisms wholly unrelated to its technical excellence.

The Open Door

The so-called "Open Door" of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is an expression of the industry's desire to receive the multitude of suggestions that come through it—panaceas for picture ills, subjects that should be treated in photoplays or in the news reels for patriotic, religious or other reasons, the protests that pictures have given offense to individual or minority interests, valued comment and suggestion with the impractical and the impossible; the evaluating and disposition of this mass of materials is done by the Public Relations Department.

The Codes

From this wealth of data, accumulated over a period of many years, it was possible to develop the Production Codes and the Advertising Code so that they represent a cross-section of informed public opinion about pictures. In the practical application of the codes, public relations supplies the liaison between producer and consumer, the industry and the public.

Studio Relations

But the Codes necessarily reflect only the body and treatment of subject matter on which there is common agreement. Above this base line of uniform judgment there is a wide field within which opinion fluctuates, problems that require solution for which there are no precedents, subjects about which public opinion is continually changing as it reflects itself in criticism, verbal approval, or at the box office. To keep this changing opinion impact upon tomorrow's pictures, public relations functions through Jason Joy, director of the Studio Relations Committee at 5504 Hollywood boulevard, Hollywood, Cal., and through the studio personnel associated with him. The process of keeping the photoplay current with that fleet phantom, public taste, can be accomplished only at the source of production in the studios where pictures are being made. If the archives of information fail to supply the answer to some production question, if no precedent is available, then it is the job of public relations to find the expert advisor, whether for a "King of Kings" or "The Big House," whose opinion about the treatment or use of subject matter involved is likely to meet with the approval of the greatest number of interested people.

Reviewing Service

With so varied a product, the American motion picture industry stands practically alone in the inclusiveness of its consumer public—the world. This alone explains its success. This, too, explains many of its problems; its consequent inability to cater to minority group interests. But the problem is rather one of bringing together the minority interest and the appropriate picture, than any dearth of pictures suited to the taste and interest of any group. The child audience is a case in point—how shall parents and children know in advance what pictures the family shall see? At Hollywood, through facilities afforded by the industry, pictures are being reviewed by committees of such groups as the Daughters of the American Revolution, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, the American Library Association and the Young Men's Christian Association. And these reports are being broadcast by radio, in the press, and through the direct mailing of monthly lists of approved pictures to the nearly twenty thousand local motion picture chairmen of these organizations and other civic bodies interested that the screen shall realize its potential beneficial influence on social progress. Making the facilities available to know what pictures these groups wish to support is a public relations function; the organization of support for those pictures, now beginning to make itself felt, is a function of the 304 national organizations which have in-

Function of All Personnel

Will Hays has placed the responsibility for what is called the public relations program of the industry on Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. This program is viewed as a continuation of the direct publicity and exploitation of motion pictures reaching, in an interpretive way, the potential motion picture audience, oftentimes critical, which is not now patronizing the theatres.

The present Public Relations Department is the result of an evolutionary process which began in 1922 when sixty national organizations formed a Public Relations Committee to cooperate with the industry. The transition from committee to department took place in order that the public relations activities of the association might be inclusive of all national bodies wishing to cooperate and because it was believed that there should be no intermediary step between the interested public and the industry.

It is the feeling of the association that characteristics of the industry's product unique to pictures make it important that public relations should be a function of all industry personnel rather than a prescribed function of a group of specialists. Discussing this subject, Milliken said:

"Of all the five years of my relationship to the association, this year just closed has witnessed the greatest public relations progress, and I attribute that in large measure to the increased interest of the personnel of all branches of the industry in a study of the public reaction to the year's product in attempting to interpret the industry to the public.

"After all," he said, "the objective of all our public relations activities is a satisfactory liaison between the theatre and the community it serves."

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures is a citizen organization reviewing films in New York City before their general release, with associate and advisory members and affiliated citizen groups throughout the country. It was founded in 1909 by the People's Institute in New York City. The National Board through its volunteer, disinterested membership seeks to reflect intelligent public opinion regarding motion pictures. It is opposed to legalized censorship and in favor of the constructive method of placing emphasis upon and building patronage for the finer and more worthy films in an effort to encourage and guide the motion picture in developing its possibilities as an important medium of expression.

The governing body of the National Board is the General Committee, evolved out of the original group organized in 1909. The Executive Committee is the directing body, formulating policies and supervising administrative affairs. The Membership Committee regulates all membership matters.

The review of pictures is conducted in New York City by trained review groups from the Review Committee of more than 250 members, representative of many activities and interests, who serve without pay. It endeavors to express the intelligent public opinion of the country in the work of film review, basic selection and recommendation. The decision of the committee regarding pictures rests upon a majority ballot.

The Exceptional Photoplays Committee, composed of critics and students of the screen, has referred to it all the films which the Review Committee believes to be of outstanding artistic merit. After review and discussion it publishes a critique of the finest films in a department of the National Board of Review Magazine. Through this medium and that of occasional showings of outstanding pictures it seeks to encourage the artistic development of the motion picture. This Committee has been responsible for much of the theory and plan behind the Little Photoplay Theatre idea.

The pictures listed below were in the judgment of the Exceptional Photoplays Committee the ten best American films and the five best foreign films submitted to the committees of the National Board during the year of 1930:

The Better Films National Council is the department of the National Board conducting the community or affiliated committee work in the field. The objects of the community activity are:

1. To study the motion picture as a medium of entertainment, instruction and artistic expression;
2. To encourage the support of the best motion pictures in the theatre;
3. To bring the best pictures to the attention of the public through the publication of a Photoplay Guide, based upon the selections and audience suitability classifications of the Review Committees of the National Board of Review;
4. To sponsor Junior Matinees, showing pictures particularly suitable for boys and girls, and week-end programs for the family audience, whenever possible with exhibitors' bookings;
5. To further the utilization of the unusual and cultural films which are not ordinarily shown in the community theatre;
6. To endorse and further the use of visual education in the schools.

The community plan as outlined by the Better Films Council of the National Board met with growing interest during the year 1930 in many localities. Groups and clubs anxious to support the best films found that this could most effectively be done by representing their organization on a Community Better Films Committee or Council. Such a committee being devoted entirely to the motion picture is a more informed group, and it has more weight in the community in contact with the schools, churches and exhibitors.

Many calls for speakers to tell of the community plan have come to the National Board from club groups anxious to enlarge the activity of their organization into the wider field of a Council of many organizations. Speakers from the Board who have responded are Dr. Walter W. Pettit, Prof. LeRoy E. Bowman, Dr. George W. Kirchwey, Dr. Louis I. Harris, Col. Clarence A. Perry, Wilton A. Barrett and Mrs. Bettina Gunzcy of the Staff.

The National Board's service has been extended to many organizations and groups including women's clubs, churches, educational societies, libraries and so forth, and to interested individuals.

The services consist of publications supplying material for study and the necessary tools for the work of the Photoplay Guide; information on the availability of prints for junior matinees; suggestions and assistance in booking films; aid in obtaining prints of exceptional and unusual pictures—not generally released—for use in arousing interest in the cultural aspect of the work; classified subject lists of films such as Selected Book-Films, Educational List, Music List, for use in schools, libraries and such groups; a speakers' bureau providing speakers on different subjects related to motion pictures; a reference file of material for study purposes.

The Sixth Annual Conference of the National Board of Review was held in New York City, January 23 to 25, 1930. The Conference was built upon the topic, "The Motion Picture as a Social Study." Educators, research and social service workers addressed the Conference on subjects touching its general theme. The speakers included:

Dr. Joseph L. Holmes, Psychology Department, Columbia University.

Dr. William H. Dudley, former director, Bureau of Visual Educational, University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Lee F. Hanmer, director, Recreation Department, Russell Sage Foundation.

Dr. Walter W. Pettit, director, Department of Community Organization, New York School of Social Work.

Dr. Francis D. Tyson, professor of Economics, University of Pittsburgh.

The exhibitor's viewpoint was presented by Edward Fay, theatre manager of Providence, R. I. The wellknown writers, Sophie Kerr and Gilbert Seldes, were speakers at an evening session at Roose-

A resolution was adopted at the final session of the Conference which read as follows:

RESOLVED, that this Conference reaffirm its support of:

- (1) The Better Films and Motion Picture Study Club Plan as interpreted and carried forward by the National Board and its affiliated groups;
- (2) Unflinching opposition to legal censorship, federal and state;
- (3) Stimulation of new local effort, and further organization for a better screen, with national contact and research aid secured through the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

The fifteenth annual luncheon brought to a close the Conference. Dr. George W. Kirchwey, member of the Executive Committee, acted as toastmaster and introduced Dr. Harry E. Barnard, director, White House Conference for Child Health and Protection called by President Hoover, who outlined the Conference plans and the part the motion picture has in any survey of child life. Other speakers were: Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former Governor of Wyoming.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros.

Fannie Hurst, novelist.

Franklin W. Fort, Congressman from New Jersey.

Mayor John T. Alsop, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla.

John M. Casey, Chief of the Department of Licenses of Boston, representing Mayor Curley.

There was a national broadcast of the program.

A number of members of the National Board's Committees serve on various committees of the White House Conference for Child Health and Protection. Among them are Dr. Pettit and Prof. Bowman, Col. Perry and Mr. Barrett. Mr. Barrett as a member of the Motion Picture and Theatre Committee contributed to the research making up the findings of this Committee for the consideration of the Conference.

The National Board of Review Magazine, containing articles of general interest on motion pictures and better films activities and reviews of exceptional and selected pictures, has been published monthly throughout the year. Other regular services are the Weekly Guide to Selected Pictures and the Weekly Official Bulletin. The Annual Selected Pictures Catalog and the Annual Selected Book-Films List, the latter prepared in cooperation with the National Association of Book Publishers for Book Week, were issued as usual and widely distributed. Special classified film lists have been compiled from time to time.

Supreme Court Decision on Credit System

Federal Judge Thatcher's 1929 decision holding the credit system used by distributors in relation with their dealings with exhibitors was reversed during 1930 by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The text of that later decision follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., ET AL.

Supreme Court of the United States

No. 95

Appeal from the District Court of the Southern District of New York.

JOHN LORD O'BRIAN, the Assistant to the Attorney General (WILLIAM D. MITCHELL, Attorney General, CLAUDE R. BRANCH and CHARLES H. WESTON, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, with him on the brief) for appellant; JOHN W. DAVIS and CORNELIUS W. WICKERSHAM (HENRY W. TAPT, PAXTON BLAIR, ARTHUR L. FISK, JR., and GABRIEL L. HESS with them on the brief) for the appellees.

Opinion of the Court

Nov. 24, 1930

Mr. Justice McREYNOLDS delivered the opinion of the Court.—The court below denied the relief sought by the United States. The parties are the same as those in No. 83, just decided—Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, et al. v. The United States of America—and the opinion there contains sufficient description of them, their business and operations.

In 1926 the Appellee Distributors caused each of the 32 Film Boards of Trade to adopt written rules for establishment and operation of a local credit committee. These committees were promptly organized and have continued to function as required. The prescribed rules provide—

That to correct abuses and unfair practices the president shall appoint a credit committee of three members to investigate and report the names of all persons who have acquired, by purchase or transfer, theatres in the territory within which the Film Board operates. The secretary of the Film Board shall be secretary of the committee and to him sales and transfers of theatres shall be promptly reported.

These shall be placed upon a "Credit information list" and copies furnished to all members of the Film Board for their confidential information. Upon receipt of such list each member shall advise the secretary concerning its existing contracts for exhibition of pictures at the listed theatre and shall state whether the transfer provided that the new owner should assume and complete outstanding contracts.

Functions of Credit Committee

That immediately upon receiving information of the transfer of a theatre the secretary shall request the new owner to furnish within five days references concerning his credit standing, etc., and to secure this information a prescribed form of questionnaire shall be sent out. The credit committee shall meet weekly to examine and report upon the credit standing of new owners and furnish a copy of their report to members as confidential information.

If a new owner fails to respond to the questionnaire, this fact shall be noted upon the credit information list. Also the credit committee shall indicate on the list every sale or transfer of a theatre which upon investigation it concludes was made by the previous owner for the purpose of avoiding or being relieved of uncompleted contracts for exhibiting pictures at such theatre.

There shall also be indicated opposite the name of each theatre listed (excepting those whose new owners have agreed to assume and complete all existing contracts entered into by the prior owners, and of which agreement notice has been given to or received by the credit committee) the amount of cash security, not exceeding $1,000, which in the judgment of the committee is a reasonable sum that members shall require to be deposited as security for the full and complete performance of each contract thereafter made and entered into for the exhibition of pictures at such theatre.

Payment of Security Requisite to Contract

That no member of the Film Board shall enter into a contract for the exhibition of pictures at any theatre listed on the credit information list for a period of 10 days from the date of the first appearance of such theatre upon the list nor thereafter unless the new owner or lessee of such theatre shall have paid in cash to such member with whom such owner or lessee desires to contract for pictures the amount of security specified on the credit information list.

Certain contracts for "spot-booking," that is for a picture to be delivered in the immediate future, may be made within the 10-day period and prior to the committee's report. The credit committee may from time to time remove from the credit information list the name of any theatre owned or operated by a new owner and thereafter members of the Film Board may contract with him.

That members upon demand of the credit committee shall furnish desired information, permit examination of books and records with respect to any exhibitor who has sold or transferred his theatre and has failed to provide for the assumption by the new owner of existing contracts. A member of the Film Board who violates any of these rules shall be subject to suspension or expulsion.

A copy of the "questionnaire" is printed in the margin. (*) It asks for many particulars concerning the new owner or transferee of the transferred theatre and especially demands specification of outstanding contracts for film service made by the previous owner and a declaration as to whether the new one has or will adopt them.

Restriction of Trade Freedom Noted

The definite point of attack in this proceeding is the agreement for the creation and operation of the credit committees and their use under prescribed rules to restrict freedom of sales by distributors and of purchases by exhibitors.

Ten producers and distributors of films, controlling 60 per cent of the business, agreed to contract with exhibitors only according to a standard form and then combined through 32 local film boards of trade with other distributors, who with themselves control 98 per cent of the entire business. The film boards appoint credit committees and these operate under the rules above outlined. The obvious purpose of the arrangement is to restrict the liberty of those who have representatives on the film boards and secure their concerted action for the purpose of coercing certain purchasers of theatres by excluding them from the opportunity to deal in a free and untrammelled market.

Reference to what has just been said in No. 83 and to the opinions in Eastern States Lumber Assn. v. United States, 234 U. S. 600; United States v. American Oil Co., 262 U. S. 371; Binderup v. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291; and Anderson v. Shipowners Assn., 272 U. S. 359, will suffice, we think, to show the challenged arrangement conflicts with the Sherman Act.

The court below erred in reaching a different conclusion and its decree must be reversed. The cause will be remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion. Reversed.

Memorandum of Infringement Decisions, Opinions, Decrees as of May 1, 1931

The following are judicial decisions or decrees which have been handed down in actions instituted by copyright proprietors of motion pictures and their respectively licensed national distributors in various District Courts of the United States, for infringement of copyright arising out of unauthorized exhibitions of their respective motion pictures by exhibitors who held over and exhibited the same in excess of the number of days permitted by the licenses contained in their written exhibition contracts, or who exhibited the pictures at theatres or places not licensed by a written exhibition contract.

In each instance where decrees were handed down, the Court awarded the statutory minimum of $250 provided by the Copyright Law for each picture thus unauthorizedly exhibited, plus an attorney's fee and court costs.

APPELLATE COURTS

Circuit Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit
 Pathe Exchange, Inc., et al. v. William Dalke
 (4 actions CCA 4, April 13, 1931).

This was an appeal from an order of Judge McDowell of the U. S. District Court, Western District of Virginia, Harrisonburg Division, dismissing the complaints in the four respective actions instituted by Pathe, Universal, First National and Fox against this exhibitor, upon the ground that the actions were filed too late within the provisions of a Virginia Statute of Limitations.

Judge McDowell's opinion was unanimously reversed by the three justices of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

DISTRICT COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES
 U. S. Dist. Court, Western Dist. Michigan, Northern Division

Vitagraph, et al. v. Grobaski, 46 F. 2d 813.

Motions were made by the defendants to dismiss the complaints in the three actions filed respectively by Vitagraph, Inc. (Warner), First National and Paramount against these exhibitors for holding over pictures an additional day. Ten separate grounds for the motion were set forth, among them being that the Copyright Law did not apply to exhibitors of motion pictures; that the exhibition contracts pursuant to which the prints were delivered for the licensed exhibitions were illegal under the Sherman Act; that they were executed without valid consideration; that the bills were not verified; that the bills were defective for want of parties; that the Court of Equity had no jurisdiction to enforce the penalty provided by the Copyright Law; that plaintiffs were in Court with unclean hands; that First National Pictures, Inc., was not authorized to do business in Michigan; and that a construction of the word "consecutive days" rendered the defendants immune from liability.

The motions were denied. Judge Raymond's opinion appears in 46 F. 2d 813.

These cases came up for trial at Marquette, Michigan, before Judge Raymond on April 7, 1931. Judge Raymond signed decrees on that day awarding damages to the plaintiffs of $250 for each picture involved.

U. S. Dist. Court, Eastern Dist., North Carolina, Durham Division

RKO, et al. v. Logan, Lewis & Lowery
 Fox v. Logan and Lewis
 Universal, et al. v. Logan, Lewis & Lowery
 Pathe v. Logan and Lewis

These cases involved holding over, bicycling and subrenting.

On March 5, 1931, a motion was made to dismiss the complaints upon the ground that they did not state a cause of action, and that the acts complained of were not protected by the Copyright Law.

Judge Meekins denied the motion in all respects and sustained the complaint.

The demurrer and Judge Meekins' order in the RKO case are the same in other cases.
 Supreme Court of the District of Columbia

RKO, et al. v. Marcus and William Notes
 The defendants made a motion before Justice Hitz to dismiss the complaint in this case (for switching without authority pictures licensed for one theatre to another theatre), upon the ground that complaint failed to state a cause of action in Equity.

On January 23, 1931, Justice Hitz denied the motion.
 U. S. Dist. Court, Southern Dist. of New York

Fox v. Standard Theatres, Inc., and Robert A. Wolf

Universal, et al., v. same
 Motions were made in these cases (for holding over pictures) to open up the default of the defendants, and dismiss the complaints upon the grounds that no infringements of copyright were involved, and that the plaintiffs were in court with unclean hands.

On July 18, 1930, Judge Bondy permitted the defendants to interpose and answer, but denied their motion to dismiss the complaint.

U. S. Dist. Court, Western Dist., Michigan, Southern Division

Metro v. Lewis

The defendant interposed a counterclaim in this holdover case, asking damages of $5,000 from the plaintiff upon the ground that the plaintiff had failed to deliver prints or sound records on time or satisfactory prints or sound records, and that certain of its pictures had so frightened the audience that patronage was lost.

A motion was made by the plaintiff to immediately dismiss this counterclaim as properly interposed in a copyright infringement suit in Equity. Judge Raymond granted the motion and dismissed the counterclaim.

In the following cases final decrees were entered by various U. S. District Court Judges against exhibitors for holding over without authority pictures licensed to their respective theatres or for exhibiting pictures at theatres unlicensed therefor. In each instance the Court awarded the minimum of $250 for each picture, plus an attorney's fee and court costs.

Supreme Court Holds Arbitration Is Illegal

The United States Supreme Court has upheld decision of Judge T. J. Thacher that the arbitration system, as practiced under the standard exhibition contract, is illegal and is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The original Thacher decision was handed down on October 15, 1929. Text of the Supreme Court decision follows:

PARAMOUNT FAMOUS LASKY CORPORATION

v.
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
Supreme Court of the United States
No. 83

Appeal from the District Court of the Southern District of New York.

JOHN W. DAVIS and CORNELIUS W. WICKERSHAM (HENRY W. TAFT, PAXTON BLAIR, ARTHUR L. FISK, JR., and GABRIEL L. HESS with them on the brief) and appellants; JOHN LORO O'BRIAN, the Assistant to the Attorney General (WILLIAM D. MITCHELL, Attorney General, CLAUDE R. BRANCH and CHARLES H. WESTON, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, with him on the brief) for appellees.

Opinion of the Court
Nov. 24, 1930

Mr. Justice McREYNOLDS delivered the opinion of the Court.

By this proceeding the United States seek to prevent further violation of section 1, Act of Congress approved July 2, 1890 (Sherman Act) c. 647, 26 Stat. 209, through an alleged combination and conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce in motion picture films.

Appellants are the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation and nine other corporations (distributors), producers and distributors throughout the Union of 60 per cent of the films used for displaying motion pictures by some 25,000 theatre owners (exhibitors); the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, a corporation with class "B" membership, composed of the above-mentioned distributors; and 32 film boards of trade, which severally function within certain defined regions.

Programs Planned Year in Advance

Each distributor produces and then distributes films through its own exchanges maintained in 32 centrally located cities—Albany, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, etc. Each of these exchanges has a manager, and under his supervision contracts are made for the use of his distributor's films within the designated territory or region, and thereafter placed in the hands of the exhibitors. Other distributors, who with appellants control 98 per cent of the entire business, also have managers with like duties in the same cities. In each region all of these managers are associated through and constitute the entire membership of the local film board of trade.

Under the common practice, in the Spring, when most of the pictures are still only in contemplation, each distributor announces its intended program of distribution for 12 months. After this announcement exhibitors are solicited to enter into written contracts for permission to display such of the pictures as they desire. And as no distributor can offer enough pictures to supply the average exhibitor's full requirement, he must deal with several.

Under an agreement amongst themselves, appellant distributors will only contract with exhibitors according to the terms of the standard exhibition contract, dated May 1, 1928. Ordinarily neither party gives security for compliance with such agreements, by cash deposit or otherwise.

This standard contract is an elaborate document, covering eight pages of the record. Under it the distributor licenses the exhibitor to display specified photo plays at a designated theatre on definite dates. Provision is made for cash payment three days in advance of any shipment, time and place of delivery, return of the prints, etc., etc. Section 13 (*) provides in substance that each party shall submit any controversy that may arise to a board of arbitration, in the city where the distributor's exchange is located, established under and controlled by written rules adopted May 1, 1928; accept as conclusive the findings of this board; and forego the right to trial by jury. And further:

"In the event that the exhibitor shall fail or refuse to consent to submit to arbitration any claim or controversy arising under this or any other standard exhibition contract which the exhibitor may have with the distributor or any other distributor or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such board of arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, the distributor may, at its option, demand, for its protection and as security for the performance by the exhibitor of this and all other existing contracts between the parties hereto, payment by the exhibitor of an additional sum not exceeding $500 under each existing contract, such sum to be retained by the distributor until the complete performance of all such contracts and then applied, at the option of the distributor, against any sums finally due or against any damages determined by said board of arbitration to be due to the distributor, the balance, if any, to be returned to the exhibitor; and in the event of the exhibitor's failure to pay such additional sum with seven (7) days after demand, the distributor may by written notice to the exhibitor suspend service hereunder until said sum shall be paid and/or terminate this contract."

Arbitration Board

The rules of arbitration provide for a board, three of whom shall be members of the local Film Board of Trade and three proprietors or managers of theatres in its region. This Arbitration Board shall have power to determine the controversy, make findings, direct what shall be done with respect to the dispute; "and shall fix the maximum amount" (not exceeding $500) which each distributor may demand as security pursuant to the arbitration clause in the event of the failure of the exhibitor to submit to arbitration or to comply with the award. The secretary of the Board of Arbitration is required to notify the secretary of the Film Board of Trade of the name and address of each exhibitor found to have refused to arbitrate or comply with an award, and the maximum amount of security (not above $500) found by the Board. "On receipt of any such notice, each member having a contract (or representing a distributor having a contract) containing the arbitration clause with any such exhibitor shall demand payment by such exhibitor of such sum as in the judgment of such member or distributor shall be sufficient to protect such member or distributor in the performance of each contract with such exhibitor. Said sum shall not exceed the actual value of any print thereafter to be delivered under each such contract plus the maximum amount fixed by the Board of Arbitration as aforesaid. Thereafter each distributor (represented in the membership) to whom such exhibitor shall have failed within seven (7) days to pay the amount of security so demanded by such distributor shall proceed to suspend service under each such contract until such exhibitor shall have furnished such security or complied with the decision of such Arbitration Board. If service under any such contract shall be so suspended for a period of 10 days such contract, at the option of the distributor, may then be canceled. No member or distributor having so suspended service under any such contract with such exhibitor shall thereafter resume service under any such contract unless and until such exhibitor shall have furnished said security to such member or distributor or shall have complied with the decision of the Arbitration Board. Upon the happening of either of such events service under such contract shall be promptly resumed by such member or distributor."

The record discloses that 10 competitors in interstate commerce, controlling 60 per cent of the entire film business have agreed to restrict their liberty of action by refusing to contract for display of pictures except upon a standard form which provides for compulsory joint action by them in respect of dealings with one who fails to observe such a contract with any distributor, all with the manifest purpose to coerce the exhibitor and limit the freedom of trade.

The United States maintain that the necessary and inevitable tendency of the outlined agreement and combination (described with greater detail in the opinion below) is to produce material and unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman Act. Eastern States Lumber Assn. v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 614; Binderup v. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291, 312. The court below accepted this view and directed an appropriate injunction against future action under the unlawful plan. We agree with its conclusion and the challenged decree must be affirmed.

Arbitration in Film Business

The Appellants claim: (1) The Standard Exhibition Contract and Rules of Arbitration dated May 1, 1928, having been evolved after six years of discussion and experimentation, are reasonable and normal regulations; so that whatever restraint follows falls short of unlawful coercion. (2) Arbitration is well adapted to the needs of the motion picture industry. (3) The manner in which the contract and rules have worked out in practice, and the significant absence of complaints, reflect their reasonable character. (4) The decree is inconsistent with the stipulated facts, also with the court's findings of fact.

"Founded upon broad conceptions of public policy, the prohibitions of the statute [Sherman Act] were enacted to prevent not the mere injury to an individual which would arise from the doing of the prohibited acts, but the harm to the general public which would be occasioned by the evils which it was contemplated would be prevented, and hence not only the prohibitions of the statute but the remedies which it provided were coextensive with such conceptions." Wilder Mfg. Co. v. Corn Products Co., 236 U. S. 165, 174. "The purpose of the Sherman Act is to prohibit monopolies, contracts and combinations which probably would unduly interfere with the free exercise of their rights by those engaged, or who wish to engage, in trade and commerce—in a word to preserve the right of freedom to trade." United States v. Colgate & Co., 250 U. S. 300, 307. "The fundamental purpose of the Sherman Act was to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against evils commonly incident to destruction of competition through monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade." Ramsay Co. v. Bill Posters Assn., 260 U. S. 501, 512. "The Sherman Act was intended to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against evils commonly incident to monopolies and those abnormal contracts and combinations which tend directly to suppress the conflict for advantage called competition—the play of the contending forces ordinarily engendered by an honest desire for gain." United States v. American Oil Co., 262 U. S. 371, 383.

The fact that the Standard Exhibition Contract and Rules of Arbitration were evolved after six years of discussion and experimentation does not show that they were either normal or reasonable regulations. That the arrangement existing between the parties can not be classed among "those normal and usual agreements in aid of trade and commerce" spoken of in Eastern States Lumber Assn. v. United States, supra, 612, is manifest. Certainly it is unusual and we think it necessarily and directly tends to destroy "the kind of competition to which the public has long looked for protection." United States v. American Oil Co., supra, 390.

The Sherman Act seeks to protect the public against evils commonly incident to the unreasonable destruction of competition and no length of discussion or experimentation amongst parties to a combination which produces the inhibited result can give validity to their action. Congress has so legislated "as to prevent resort to practices which unduly restrain competition or unduly obstruct the free flow of such commerce, and private choice of means must yield to the national authority thus exerted." Eastern States Lumber Assn. v. United States, supra, 613.

It may be that arbitration is well adapted to the needs of the motion picture industry; but when under the guise of arbitration parties enter into unusual arrangements which unreasonably suppress normal competition their action becomes illegal.

In order to establish violation of the Sherman Act it is not necessary to show that the challenged arrangement suppresses all competition between the parties or that the parties themselves are discontinued with the arrangement. The interest of the public in the preservation of competition is the primary consideration. The prohibitions of the statute cannot "be evaded by good motives. The law is its own measure of right and wrong, and what it permits, or forbids, and the judgment of the courts cannot be set up against it in a supposed accommodations of its policy with the good

Developments of the greatest significance effecting improvement of production and exhibition of the motion picture are noted in the report of the Progress Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, presented before the Society at its Spring meeting May 25, 1931, in Hollywood.

Following is an abridgement of that report as prepared for Motion Picture Almanac by G. E. Mathews, chairman.

Films and Emulsions.—Concurrent with the general slackening up of business which began late in the fall of 1930 and prevailed throughout the spring of 1931, there was an abandonment of the wide film program by the producing organizations. Cost of installations in the face of a business depression and insufficient public interest in wide pictures were two probable causes of this decision.

One of the most important developments for many years was the introduction of panchromatic emulsions of increased speed and improved color sensitiveness, particularly in the red and green regions of the spectrum. With these ultra-sensitive materials, exposures may be made under more difficult conditions of illumination than with former emulsions or a better definition and depth of focus may be secured by stopping down the lens. Such emulsions offer great promise in connection with color photography where the difficulties of obtaining sufficient exposure have long been recognized. Greater care must naturally be used in handling these faster stocks both in the camera and in the processing laboratories.

Faster emulsions for sound recording work have also been introduced, to replace the relatively slow positive film in common use.

The practice of duplication of all valuable negatives is increasing. According to present technic, master positives are made on a lavender base positive emulsion, and the duplicate negative on an especially fine grain yellow dyed emulsion, particularly made for duplication.

A direct color process claimed to be applicable to motion picture film was announced as being available for exploitation in Germany. Colloidal silver emulsions are used which are developed in a closed container with the vapors of formaldehyde, ammonia, and alcohol.

Some measure of the resistance of exposed but undeveloped photographic films to the action of water, snow, and ice was shown when the last camp of Andree was discovered on White Island in August, 1930. The films had been lying there since 1898. Professor J. Hertzberg of the Royal Technical University, Stockholm, Sweden, developed them and found that 50 of the 192 exposures contained traces of the image; and 20 made satisfactory pictures when processed, thirty-three years after being exposed in the camera.

Studio and Location.—Refinements in methods of sound recording represented the most significant advance in American studio practice during the winter of 1930-1931. Production in most of the European studios had settled down to routine work.

The bulky, heavy "blimps" or sound-proof housings for cameras are gradually being displaced by insulation within the camera body itself. Many improvements have also been made in the way of silencing the actual mechanism of the camera. Features of the new Warner Brothers' camera are: an enclosed movement; a lens which moves only in a horizontal plane during focussing by making the entire turret movable. A new camera was recently perfected by the Fearless Camera Company which is adapted for use either with 35 mm. or wider film up to 50 mm. No housing is required for all average camera work and the cameraman may use it for recording sound directly in the camera if so desired.

During the last six months, there has been a marked increase in truck shots in which the camera is mounted on a "dolly" or perambulator, which is moved with or around the action during the progress of a scene. In making "Cimarron," "The Lady Refuses," and several other pictures, an elaborate truck was found useful. Parts of an automobile chassis were used in its construction. A central tower was built which could be raised to a height of 23 feet. Additional platforms were also available so that the truck accommodated about six people, two cameras, a microphone reflector, and other accessories.

Studio Illumination.—One of the most outstanding developments in studio lighting equipment during the past six months was the production of silicon aluminum housings designed particularly to eliminate the objectionable noises commonly given off by the older sheet iron housing when a lamp is warming up. Common sizes in use are an 18-inch unit for a 2,000-watt lamp and a 24-inch unit for the 5,000-watt lamp, respectively. When it is undesirable to increase the number of 1,000-watt or 1,500-watt units, large reflector types are utilized which are fitted with 5,000-watt 115-volt lamps, and which distribute their radiation over an angle of 25 degrees.

Sound Recording.—According to Knox the problems of the sound engineer are (1) extension of the frequency range of recording and reproducing equipment, (2) increasing the volume range so that fainter and louder sounds can be recorded and reproduced, and (3) reducing ground noise to a minimum.

A most significant improvement in the quality of sound reproduced from variable density records has resulted from the introduction of the biased valve method of recording by Western Electric. By this method, ground noise has been reduced to 10 db., according to Silent. A new auxiliary circuit is associated with the light valve, and when the sound currents are small, the ribbons vibrate over a small amplitude. As the sound volume increases, the spacing between the ribbons is increased automatically to a maximum by the auxiliary circuit. Full benefit of the system can be derived only by proper development of the sound track and close cooperation is therefore necessary between the sound department and the processing laboratory.

Another ground noise reduction method of equal significance is that described by Townsend, Clark and McDowell for use in conjunction with variable width recording of sound. In principle, this scheme, like the Western Electric "Noiseless Recording" process, consists in rectifying a portion of the output of the recording amplifier and using this current to keep the amount of light admitted to the film at a minimum.

According to reports from the West Coast Studios, the amount of electrical recording is increasing and the present tendency is to incorporate sound effects into the original sound track after it has been recorded and developed.

A new type of microphone for which directional pickup characteristics are claimed, has been developed by RCA Photophone. The principle on which the microphone operates is that of induction of electric current in an extremely thin and light corrugated aluminum ribbon, placed between the poles of an electro-magnet. Sounds normal to the face of the microphone are picked up whereas sounds at angles to the normal are received very feebly if at all.

The question of acoustic treatment of sound stages and theatres continued to receive active consideration. Linck has reported the results of oscillographic studies of sound in several types of rooms. On the West Coast, one of the equipment manufacturers has built an Acoustic Laboratory fitted to make absorption and transmission measurements over a wider frequency band than has ever before been attempted.

RCA Photophone has designed a compact sound recording truck fitted with a monitoring and a recording compartment. The entire Tanar sound truck is insulated to serve as a monitor room, sufficient amplification being supplied for four microphones.

As was foreseen, film recording is tending to displace disk recording, because of the greater ease of editing sound records on film and the introduction of methods of minimizing ground noise, whereas disk recording affords little opportunity for further reduction in surface noise. A selenium cell designed by Thirring, a condenser type, is used in the Selenophone process as the light sensitive element. The company has developed a method of recording on paper for use with amateur equipment.

According to a report from India, sound pictures are becoming increasingly popular especially since recording equipment has become available. Three companies have recording equipment, and the first all Indian feature picture scheduled for release in March was recorded in Hindustani. This creates a precedent and if followed will be a tremendous step forward in solving the vexed question of one language for the country instead of the 300 odd dialects at present used.

Thin unbleached muslin cloth, properly stretched, does away with reverberation almost entirely on motion picture sets and permits much greater flexibility in sound recording. It is often possible, with such sets, to take medium and close-up camera shots simultaneously, using only one sound pickup. A set made entirely of cloth is a rarity but it is not uncommon to make them 75 per cent of cloth.

Laboratory Practice.—Since the advent of the sound picture, the technic of laboratory processing has improved considerably. The significance of sensitometry in relation to sound and picture quality is being realized more and more each year. Recent processes of ground noise reduction demand an even higher laboratory precision in film development. In the field of sensitometry there has been a tendency to concentrate on time scale devices rather than on intensity scale instruments. There is a need, however, for standardization on a particular type of instrument so that comparisons between controls at the various studios could easily be made.

Problems facing laboratories are (1) a means of measuring quickly the developing activity of a bath or the gamma to which the film is being developed, (2) a method of maintaining the bromide concentration constant throughout the life of the solution and recovering this salt from the bath, and (3) a non-staining developer for the development of variable density sound film.

An investigation has been started by a special sub-committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences relative to methods and standards in film processing. Formal recognition will be given desirable standards to which there is general agreement.

Light valve recording on the underexposure or "toe" portion of the characteristic curve is stated by Lewin to be in use by Paramount for scoring and playbacks.

Goldschmidt has described a photometer for calibrating printing lamps which employs a photocell and a precision torsion galvanometer, reading directly in lux. For printing "stills" in a German laboratory, a semi-automatic device is used. Two graduated filters may be moved simultaneously, one over the printing light and the other over a comparison lamp of fixed intensity. A photometer which compares the extreme densities on the negative indicates the contrast grade of paper required.

A growing demand exists for the inspection of every release print for sound and picture quality. One type of film inspection equipment consists of a standard Western Electric reproducer set installed on a projector. Sound is picked up by a caesium cell and fed into an amplifier, having an out-put ample for headset monitoring, or with additional amplification, standard theatre horns may be used. A sound head made by Vinten is being used in England for the examination of release print quality.

General Projection Equipment and Practice.—Practically an instantaneous change of lenses was stated to be possible with a new front plate assembly for the Powers projector. Other modifications are a lens centering device, a micrometer focussing pinion, a framing lamp, and an aperture change assembly. The shutter on the German Bauer M-7 projector is now arranged in front of the condenser lens in accordance with recent projector construction practice.

The use of separate projectors for reproducing the sound was initiated in a London theatre, the Pavilion, in November, 1930. For preview service, in Hollywood, one company has provided two portable dummy sound projectors. These are installed in the theatre and coupled to the regular projector before the preview. This permits the studio to have a preview of any production using the assembled intercut prints of both picture and sound track and it eliminates the necessity of making a sound print which usually requires cutting after the preview.

Sound reproducing equipment is being manufactured by a British firm which use a magnetic coupling between the projector and the turntable. A single photoelectric cell is placed centrally between two projectors. On the Friess sound projector, the starting of the projector and fading is accomplished automatically by means of the film strip itself. The film is inserted in the projector for a change-over without regard to synchronization. Metallic contacts on the film then actuate relays successively which lower the needle into the proper groove, close the fader circuit, and extinguish the light in the first projector.

In the Projectophone devised by Mihaly the sound track image is projected by a suitable optical system onto a caesium photocell located at some distance from the projector. If the detector is located at one side of the main projection screen, it obviates the need of wiring between the projection booth and the screen.

A shallow type horn has been introduced by the Western Electric Company, which is provided with twin air columns meeting in a common mouthpiece. The equipment is 26 inches deep, 107 inches wide, and 62 inches high.

Changes in sound reproduction caused by varying slit width have been considered by von Hartel. Besides presenting mathematical formulas concerning the sound intensity variations as the slit is gradually widened, the paper gives data showing that halation causes overtones which consist especially of octaves.

Frediani avoids the use of photocells in sound reproduction of variable density records by passing them between electric contacts connected with the grid circuit of a thermionic amplifier. For such reproduction, paper prints may be used.

Projector Lenses, Shutters, and Light Sources.—The recent use of screen pictures of large size has led to the development of lens turrets on projectors with objectives of the desired focal length ready to be moved into position to suit the requirements of the program.

The demand for higher powered light sources in the theatres using low intensity reflecting arc lamps has been met by the production of a higher amperage trim. It is designed for 32 to 42 amperes at the arc. Previously, 32 amperes at the arc was the highest attainable. The introduction of a pre-cratered high intensity projector carbon was also noted.

Special Projection Equipment.—Two new types of portable continuous projectors have been marketed, one for 35 mm. film and the other for 16mm. film. Approximately 400 feet of sound film can be accommodated on the 35 mm. projector.

Considerable research has been conducted by Ives to devise cameras and projectors for the production of pictures showing relief. The method consists, essentially, of making a series of pictures from juxtaposed points around an object and projecting the prints from these onto a special screen. Two types of screens having these properties have been developed, one made of vertical solid celluloid rods, and the other of strips of mirror. More recently a stationary camera requiring only a single exposure has been devised but Ives considers that much research is considered necessary to perfect the process.

Three new types of screen have been described in the literature as being available commercially. A non-inflammable screen of rubber composition perforated with small holes was demonstrated in November in London. Another type of screen incorporates a cooling system for the theatre. Behind the metal screen surface is located a refrigerating plant which causes the screen to become entirely coated with white frost. In the third type, a non-glare and pseudo relief principle is introduced.

Theatre Acoustics and Construction.—From experience to date, it would appear that the most satisfactory results from the standpoint of sound reproduction are obtained in theatres having a maximum seating capacity of not over 2,000 seats. In theatres of much larger seating capacity, the sound quality suffers considerably when the auditorium is only partially filled, whereas in the smaller theatres this condition is not as serious.

A chain of midget motion picture houses is being planned for operation throughout the United States. The seating capacity will average about 200 and the shows will be of varying length from 15 minutes to 1 hour.

In connection with the statement that about 55 per cent of the 22,731 theatres of the United States are now wired for sound, it is of interest to learn that the Opera of Malta, which has remained practically unchanged since it was built 200 years ago, has recently been wired for the showing of sound pictures.

According to a U. S. Government Bureau report, acoustic problems in Brazilian theatres are very difficult of solution. Walls are made of concrete or stucco and seats of plain wood. It is extremely difficult to use drapes as the insects attack most materials used.

Applications of Motion Pictures.—Production of sound pictures has been initiated by the U. S. Agriculture Department in its own studio in Washington. One of the first pictures scheduled is the Indian sign language film which is being made for the U. S. Department of the Interior.

Sound pictures are receiving attention in England. In December 800 educational associations were called into conference at Burlington House to consider the value of

Deluxe Seating... Acoustically Correct

THE chair shown above typifies the class, comfort, and box-office appeal of the new Heywood-Wakefield Theatre Seating. From every angle the new H-W Chairs have that class, comfort, and style which lend prestige and build profits for any theatre, regardless of size. Most of the new H-W Chairs have been designed for use in sound houses. Several of them were developed in cooperation with Publix engineers who have made exhaustive studies of acoustical requirements in theatre equipment. The chair shown above is particularly adapted to sound use. Its soft, luxurious, sound absorbing upholstery; its custom type of tailoring on the seat and back; and its refreshingly modern aisle standard make this seat one of the most beautiful and practical designs ever built.

Publix has installed more than a quarter million H-W Theatre Seats. Many other leading chains and independents have also specified H-W Seats because of their fine workmanship, smart design, unusual comfort, and long wear. If you are planning to seat a new house or reseat an old one, it will pay you to get all the facts on H-W Theatre Seating. A note to the nearest H-W Sales Office will bring complete information.

Eligibility for membership is determined by the Board of Governors, which has interpreted the word "engineer" to apply to anyone who contributes to the building of a motion picture so that those who contribute literary, dramatic and artistic talent, are equally as eligible as those who direct the business of production and distribution of motion pictures.

Four Types of Memberships

Membership is of four types: associate, active, sustaining, and honorary. Any one who is interested in motion pictures is eligible for associate membership. Active membership is granted to those who have gained distinction in their particular field of endeavor. Sustaining members are those who contribute substantially to the support of the society, while honorary membership has been granted those scientists of international fame who, by their inventions and achievements, have been largely responsible for the building of this great industry.

Conventions of the society are held semi-annually, when an opportunity is presented for the research workers and technicians from the various manufacturing and producing concerns to pool their knowledge for the common good but, in turn, each one who gives receives knowledge from others in good measure. The lasting personal friendships formed between the members at the society's conventions also add a further incentive to the mutual interchange of ideas and information and the value of these men to their employers is enhanced accordingly.

The various scientific papers and committee reports presented at the conventions and the discussions resulting therefrom are published in the Journal of the Society issued monthly. In addition, the Journal contains contributed papers, abstracts of current technical literature, patent abstracts, translations of outstanding articles appearing in foreign technical publications, reports of committee activities, and book reviews. During the year 1930, 1,500 pages of scientific data were published, including over 100 technical papers dealing with the various aspects of production and exhibition.

Comprehensive Technical Source

The Society's Transactions which were published quarterly from the year 1916 to 1929, together with the Journal of the Society published since January, 1930, constitute the most comprehensive source of motion picture technical information in the world. The potential value of this knowledge to the industry is incalculable and the actual cost of the research work required to obtain it amounts to billions of dollars. The Journal of the Society is distributed gratis to members but is available to nonmembers by subscription.

The Society maintains local sections with headquarters in New York, Chicago, and Hollywood, which foster a spirit of cooperation among the members who cannot always attend the semiannual conventions. The Hollywood section keeps the parent body in touch with activities on the West Coast and maintains contacts with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Collaborate Abroad

The Standards Committee has made possible the interchange of the essential parts of apparatus throughout the industry and has published details of these in booklet form in collaboration with the American Standards Association. The Society has also collaborated with the British,

French, and German technical societies on matters relating to standards.

A subcommittee of the Standards Committee consisting of the chief engineers of the various producing organizations, under an impartial chairmanship, has convened at frequent intervals during the past year with a view to recommending dimensional standards for wide film. The merits of films having widths varying from 70, 65, 63, and 50 mm. were considered and practical demonstrations arranged. The committee is of the opinion that film having a width of 50 mm. is adequate to produce a picture of satisfactory quality on the widest screen available in the majority of theatres and has drawn up dimensional standards for such a film. This does not mean that the industry will necessarily adopt 50 mm. film as a means of securing a wide picture or that the Society considers that the use of such film is the preferred method of securing a large screen picture with sound accompaniment, because there are decided merits in placing the sound track on a separate film as outlined in an open discussion on the subject at the fall, 1930, meeting of the Society.

To the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is due credit, however, for preventing the producers from plunging into a scramble to place wide film apparatus in the field in the absence of a standard.

Other committees of the society have dealt with progress in color, methods of securing better sound recording and reproduction, and improved methods of studio lighting, while the Historical Committee has prepared reports on the accomplishments of the industry's pioneers and is assembling historical apparatus which will be placed in a suitable depository.

Projection Room Standards

The subject of projection has been given special attention by the Projection Practice, Projection Theory, and Projection Screens Committees and as a result of their efforts, recommendations for standard lay-outs of projection rooms of various sizes have been made and data secured for formulating a tentative standard for screen brightness.

The past year has also been conspicuous by virtue of increased activity of the society in relation to collaboration with other organizations and societies having interests related to our own. The society has acquired membership in the American Standards Association which has recognized the various standards adopted by the society, and also in the National Fire Protection Association which has invited the society to collaborate with regard to safety measures in the handling of nitrocellulose film.

The society will be officially represented at the 1931 International Congress of Photography in Dresden and arrangements for the exchange of technical manuscripts have been made with the Deutsche Kinotechnische Gesellschaft which has also conferred honorary membership upon the presidency of our society. The society was also represented officially on the Inter-Society on Color Specifications sponsored by the Optical Society of America.

A booklet dealing with the Standards Adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and a 200-page booklet entitled "Aims and Accomplishments of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers," which contains abstracts of all technical papers presented by the society since its beginning, may be obtained gratis on application to the society headquarters, 33 West 42nd Street, New York, N. Y.

SERVING THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY'S EXACTING REQUIREMENTS

FOR PERFECT YEAR ROUND WEATHER IN THEATRES
AND SCIENTIFIC DRYING IN MODERN LABORATORIES

TO GUARD their health as well as to assure patrons absolute comfort regardless of outdoor weather, the modern theatre is provided with a scientifically designed air conditioning plant affording precision control of temperature, humidity and circulation.

To produce motion picture prints of satisfactory quality and long life, developing in the modern laboratory is by machine and drying is by a process involving conditioning of an extreme degree of accuracy as to moisture content, temperature and cleanliness of the air.

Thus the motion picture industry employs air conditioning as an economic essential in its manufacturing processes as well as the merchandising of its product—entertainment.

It is significant that the foremost examples of modern film laboratories are provided with air conditioning systems designed and engineered by Tiltz— notably the Fox Film Corporation Laboratories in New York and Hollywood, Columbia Pictures Laboratory, Hollywood, Multicolor Laboratory, Hollywood.

Equally notable is the fact that Tiltz engineers designed and installed the air conditioning plant that went into the fourth theatre in the world to make its air pure and comfortable for patrons of the motion picture. Since that time Tiltz systems have been installed in twenty-two other theatres in this country.

A recent Tiltz development brings to theatres of all sizes the means of offering its patrons comfortable weather the year round. This advancement of the science of air conditioning makes it practical for every theatre, be its capacity 500 or 5,000 seats, to install air conditioning on a cost-per-seat basis that is economically sound.

SPECIALIZING IN AIR CONDITIONING FOR 15 YEARS

SOUND*

The rapidity with which the reproduction and projection of sound in synchronization with motion pictures has been promoted during the relatively short period of its existence has been and is nothing less than astounding. Our ability to sit comfortably in the motion picture theatre of today and hear the silent shadow, not infrequently representing people who have answered the Last Roll Call upon earth, apparently talking to us, singing to us or producing instrumental music of marvelous beauty, with every semblance of actuality, is something parallel to a great monument of finest marble—or perhaps even of sold gold—to the designing and construction engineers who have brought forth this marvel of the ages.

The motion picture theatre has available for use twelve or more different sound systems, at least two of which maintain a corps of highly efficient service engineers who make periodic, systematic examinations of all their installations, and at all times are available to the exhibitor or projectionist for emergency calls. These two corporations are Western Electric Company and RCA Photophone, Inc., both of which put out equipment in several different forms. The price varies with the form or type of equipment. The highest grade system of one or the other of them is used in practically all of our large, deluxe theatres, the same being, of course, the most expensive and best sound reproduction and projection systems extant. In less expensive form the systems of these two corporations are used in very many of our smaller theatres.

In addition to Western Electric and RCA Photophone systems there are three less elaborate ones in use in thousands of the smaller theatres, namely the DeForest system Phonofilm, put out by General Talking Pictures Corporation; the Pacent, by Pacent Reproducer Corporation and the Universal Sound System, by a company of that name.

In addition to these three widely used systems there are several others which have attained some degree of favor, as follows: The Powers System, put out by the Powers Cinephone Corporation, the Mellaphone, made by the Mellaphone Corporation, Rochester, New York; the Royal Amplitone, the name of the sponsors of which is not at the moment at hand; the Photone Talkafilm, by Simplimis, Inc.; the Kinetone, by S&S Enterprises, Inc., and the Goetz System, by Goetz Moviephone, Inc.

This completes the list, save for possibly some few others that have not as yet had sufficient usage to become known except to those using them.

It would be presumptuous to make comparison of the basic merits of these various systems, except in the most broad way. It would be improper to make such an attempt, for the simple reason that it is doubtful that any one man has as yet acquired a sufficiently thorough knowledge of the relative excellence of them all to enable him to form a sound judgment as to the matter of sound reproduction and projection and dependability and economy in performance.

It seems very right and proper, however, to warn exhibitors and projectionists against the acceptance of unsupported statements with regard to sound systems or apparatus. It also seems quite advisable also to suggest to exhibitors and projectionists that in the purchase of sound reproduction and projection systems there are three basic points to consider, first, the relative excellence of results which may be attained from the system under consideration, as compared with other available systems; second, the ability of the system under consideration to operate economically as to power requirements and repair and replacement bills; third, just what is going to happen if there is no "service" provided and the system lets down and may be put into successful operation again only by consultation with some technical man located, possibly hundreds of miles away.

These are all matters of vital importance, and unless they be very carefully considered it is entirely possible that regret and loss will follow. The exhibitor should also keep carefully in mind the fact that it is constant excellence in sound results that brings in money at the box office, or lack of it fails to do so.

With these thoughts in mind it may well be reasoned that high additional first cost need not necessarily be considered an extravagance; also that money paid out for service may be an asset instead of a liability. It is not what the cost is, but what the outlay brings in at the box office cash drawer. In fact, if an additional expense results either in a better quality of sound or in more economical, dependable action, then it certainly is what cannot possibly be considered as other than a wise, profitable investment, except that of course both installation and operating cost must be kept within the possibilities of available patronage.

The matter of sound recording is not within the legitimate field of this writer's activities, hence that field will be passed over with the notation that recently there has been what seems to be a very great step taken toward perfection. This improvement consists of the reduction of ground noise to a point where, provided the theatre equipment be in perfect condition, it is conspicuous by almost total absence. Put in another way, unless there be sound which was recorded by intention, then there is to all intents and purposes no sound at all. The improvement is, your writer can personally testify, very great.

However, there is one point that cannot be too highly stressed. It applies equally to any and all makes of apparatus. It is the human element. Every sound system must of course be handled by and cared for by some man or men. It is self evident that unless this man or these men give the apparatus expert care and attention, both in its handling when in use and in the item of maintenance, it will not deliver perfect results. This is a rather tremendously important item, and one to which many exhibitors give entirely too little attention.

Assuming the auditorium to be acoustically perfect and the sound equipment itself be in perfect condition and of high grade basic excellence, if that equipment be in charge of and handled by a man who thoroughly understands it, and who has the necessary ambition and energy to apply his knowledge at its full value, then we may assume that the sound in that theatre will be just about 100 per cent perfect.

On the other hand, no matter how perfect the auditorium may be acoustically, regardless of how basically perfect the equipment itself may be, if it be handled by men who lack expert knowledge, or have knowledge but lack the energy to apply that knowledge, then the sound will not be perfect. It will be imperfect exactly in proportion to the imperfection in knowledge of the man in charge.

Remembering that perfection in sound, coupled with perfection in projection of the motion picture, means maximum results at the box office, exhibitors and managers will do well to give very serious consideration to this.

Exhibitors who desire to get the greatest possible excellence in motion picture projection and in sound reproduction, must remember certain facts. First, it is impossible to have perfection in results unless the equipment itself be kept in first class condition. That should appeal to the exhibitor and motion picture theatre manager as incontestable and indisputable, yet there are a great many projectionists producing relatively poor results for no other reason than that the manager compels them to use worn projector and sound equipment parts after the time the projectionists have asked for replacements. It would really seem that this ought to appeal to exhibitors as being a practice which in the very nature of things must be very costly in the end.

Were this matter laid before the courts it would be so decided on both counts. Yet we find exchanges supplying films more or less smeared with oil, and we find theatre managers accepting that sort of service, well knowing that perfection cannot be obtained in either the screen image or in the sound, if the sound be carried on the films. We also find the exchanges delivering films containing mechanical imperfections which it was the duty of the exchange to remove.

It is absolutely absurd to expect high grade sound or high grade screen images so long as this practice continues, nor is it any excuse for an exchange to say it is the projectionist himself who inflicts the damage. It is the business of the exchange, so far as possible, to repair all damage inflicted by its customers and if the damage be continuously excessive, the exchange should take up the matter with the theatre management for adjustment. That is not argument. It is just plain common sense.

Summing this whole thing up, we now have available a considerable number of sound systems capable of delivering very close to perfection in results, but in order to obtain perfection that equipment must be expertly cared for and handled, and must be serviced with films and records in as nearly as possible perfect condition.

SMPE REPORT

A preliminary survey made by the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce indicated that there were over 2,000 concerns in the United States using motion pictures for business purposes.

Film exports fell off slightly for the year 1930 as reported by Golden, compared with 1929, although the actual valuation increased. Footage and valuation were as follows:

1930—274,351,000 linear feet valued at $8,118,000.

1929—282,215,000 linear feet valued at $7,622,000.

Of the total footage exported, 186,436,000 feet, or 67 per cent, represented sound pictures.

Domestic sound picture equipment sales for 1930 totalled $32,635,000 according to Electronics, and export sales amounted to $8,250,000 which made the total equipment sales equal $40,885,000.

WHY WE DO NOT EXACT A WEEKLY SERVICE CHARGE FROM DE FOREST PHONOFILM USERS

DE FOREST PHONOFILM equipments are not and never have been leased on a compulsory weekly service expense basis.

ALL DE FOREST PHONOFILM installations (in use over a two year period) were analysed, and the exhibitors' expense for both service and parts determined. The average weekly total cost was found to be exceptionally low, being a small fraction of the amount charged by equipment companies, who regularly exact a fixed service charge.

DE FOREST PHONOFILM EQUIPMENTS ARE DESIGNED, MANUFACTURED, AND INSTALLED SO THAT SERVICE REQUIREMENTS AND COSTS ARE AND WILL BE AT AN ABSOLUTE MINIMUM.

Certainly it is our desire to continue, and reduce if possible, this low maintenance expense—consistent, of course, with each PHONOFILM installation providing the highest quality reproduction—every day.

And the every day profitable and highly satisfactory service obtained by exhibitors who are using PHONOFILM EQUIPMENTS is proof of the merit of the PHONOFILM EQUIPMENT and its profit-paying advantages to motion picture exhibitors.

If you are interested in obtaining a new equipment for the reproduction of talking motion pictures, or replacing the one you are now using, your inquiry is requested.

Prompt attention, courteous relationship and continued economy—all meaning more profit to you—will be the result of your decision to use DE FOREST PHONOFILM EQUIPMENT in your theatre.

A Screen for Every Type of Theatre

No one type of screen is best suited for any type of theatre. A wide house, one with a steep throw, the long, narrow type or the house using Low Intensity or Mazda light—all should have a screen best suited to their particular condition. We make four types of sound screen—covering the entire range to suit every possible condition of projection, type and size of theatre.

 All Only
 With

SYNCRIFILM

Modern sound recording has been perfected, but only Syncrofilm has reached equal heights of reproduction. Because it uses four times as much light as others, it brings out the faintest marks on both area and density recordings. It sounds all the delicate overtones as well as the fundamentals. It is mechanically perfect: precision bearings are chrome and cadmium plated to resist corrosion and wear. Uses revolving drum instead of friction gate, so does not wear or scratch film. Now used in over 2,000 theatres. The full beauty of sound is on every film. Get it all in the only possible way—use Syncrofilm. Prices are in line. Ask for them.

Holmes; e. high school the good old days and picked up the remainder of it on various desks for thirty years; married; has one son, E. M. Holmes, medical student at Georgetown University. He started in the composing room, went to the city room as office boy early in 1896 and after varied routines he went on the city desk about twenty-five years ago and has been doing dramatics and news desks since that time. He covered the first explosion with talking pictures in Norfolk and the first motion picture shown in Norfolk. Began his career as critic by reviewing a circus during his cub days and then tackled everything except opera. He tackled the first of the talkies and "has suffered with them since the first effort to make them intelligible." Has specialized in vaudeville for many years but prefers musical reviews, "which were abundant before the first intellectual drought struck the hinterland." He has no hopes that the road will ever come back but still believes that a good agent can sell a bad show and can prove that this has been done and that clever exploitation has put over many poor motion pictures, silent and otherwise. He is beginning to believe that critics are being tolerated by the public, "which always laughs at the serious efforts of reviewers to enlighten a certain percentage of dumb customers who give no thought to the story or any other necessary actor in the success of a picture."

South Tenth street Grammar school, Barringer high school, both at Newark, N. J., and Livingston high school; not married. Has been an employe of the Newark Sunday Call since September, 1920, and has been motion picture editor for nearly six years. Prior to that he served a two year apprenticeship in the department under Rowland B. Stalter. In addition to editing film pages, he conducts a column called "Mainly About Movies," and consisting of outspoken picture reviews and comment on other film angles. The Sunday Call publishes only on Sunday and has a circulation of 95,000. He receives an average of 150 letters a year, most of them disagreeing with his opinions on pictures. His assistant is Mrs. Clady Wyngard. He originated the idea of permitting a non-professional theatre-goer to contribute each week her impressions on current films. The writer was selected from a group of letter writers, the choice being based on her keen interest in motion pictures and ability to express herself better than most. She knows no managers and they do not know her even by sight. Her views are printed unchanged. There have been three such contributors since the stunt was started. A change is made as soon as the writer gets the professional theatre-goer slant.

TELL, P. W.: Pen name, Chris Graham. Motion picture editor and critic, Home News, New York City, N. Y.; b. New York City, March 14, 1904; p. Samuel and Clara Tell; m. Rae Tell, has two children, Addison M. Tell, who eats his spinach, and Laurette Tell, "who doesn't." Gained his present post through hard work, good conduct, "and the fact that all others sent to cover films used to fall asleep." Co-author of a play, "Pressing Business," produced this season at the Republic theatre, New York, and on the road. Author of other plays, none of them produced as yet, however. "First job was office boy in the old Vitagraph Company," and that is believed by film historians to have hastened the downfall of that organization. Very eccentric, because he doesn't drink. Sleeps on his left side, because he carries his money in his left-hand pocket. Never endorsed tooth paste, cigars or face powder, because no one ever asked him to. Thinks the movies have a wonderful future, which is why Laurette Tell, who doesn't, would want to impair that future. Knows everybody in the movie business, but nobody in the movie business knows him. His two youngsters also are clever. They take after their mother.

THEATRES keen for modern, artistic screen and stage presentation will find this feature a most progressive innovation. For two years we worked to assemble this catalog of original designs to link with feature pictures, short subjects, trailers, organ solos and stage shows. The subjects were painted by finished artists and brilliantly hand colored to produce spec-intention of parties and, it may be, of some good results." Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 49.

Upon examination of the record we cannot say that the decree of the court below is inconsistent with the stipulated facts or with proper regard to what that court held in respect of the facts.

The challenged decree must be affirmed.

(*)Eighteenth. The parties hereto agree that before either of them shall resort to any court to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereunder, each shall submit to the Board of Arbitration (established or constituted pursuant to the Rules of Arbitration filed with the American Arbitration Association, 342 Madison Avenue, New York City, bearing date May 1, 1928, and identified by the signatures of the Contract Committee appointed at the 1927 Motion Picture Trade Practice Conference, a copy of which will be furnished to the Exhibitor upon request in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served or if there be no such Board of Arbitration in such city then to the Board of Arbitration in the city nearest thereto (unless the parties hereto agree in writing that such submission shall be made to a Board of Arbitration located in another specified city), all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination pursuant to the said Rules of Arbitration and the rules of procedure and practice adopted by such Board of Arbitration.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision and award of such Board of Arbitration in any such arbitration proceeding, and agree and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the laws of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force; and each party hereto hereby waives the right to trial by jury upon any issue arising under this contract, and agrees to accept as conclusive the findings of fact made by any such Board of Arbitration, and consents to the introduction of such findings in evidence in any judicial proceeding.

In the event that the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to consent to submit to arbitration any claim or controversy arising under this or any other Standard Exhibition Contract which the Exhibitor may have with the Distributor or any other distributor or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such board of Arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, the Distributor may, at its option, demand, for its protection and as security for the performance by the Exhibitor of this and all other existing contracts between the parties hereto, payment by the Exhibitor of an additional sum not exceeding $500 under each existing contract, such sum to be retained by the Distributor until the complete performance of all such contracts and then applied, at the option of the Distributor, against any sums finally due or against any damages determined by said Board of Arbitration to be due to the Distributor, the balance, if any, to be returned to the Exhibitor; and in the event of the Exhibitor's failure to pay such additional sum within seven (7) days after demand, the Distributor may by written notice to the Exhibitor suspend service hereunder until said sum shall be paid and/or terminate this contract.

In the event that the Distributor shall fail or refuse to consent to the submission to arbitration of any claim or controversy arising under this or any other Standard Exhibition Contract providing for arbitration which the Distributor may have with the Exhibitor, or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such Board of Arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, within the number of days specified in Article Twenty-second opposite the name of the City in which such Board of Arbitration is located, the Exhibitor may at his option terminate this and any other existing contract between the Exhibitor and the Distributor by mailing notice by registered mail within two (2) weeks after such failure or refusal, and in addition the Distributor shall not be entitled to redress from such Board of Arbitration upon any claim or claims against any exhibitor until the Distributor shall have complied with such decision, and in the meanwhile the provisions of the first paragraph of this Article Eighteen shall not apply to any such claim or claims.

Any such termination by either party, however, shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy which the party so terminating may have by reason of any such breach of contract by the other party.

The provision of this contract relating to arbitration shall be construed according to the law of the State of New York.

U. S. Court Holds Contract Is Divisible

The following decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Lynchburg, Va., is considered one of the most important legal developments of the year because it holds a distributor is not required to proceed first to arbitrate, as provided in the standard exhibition contract, before bringing action against an exhibitor for breach of contract. In other words, it stresses the fact that the contract is divisible, an argument not recognized by the general exhibitor body.

Distributors anticipate the Lynchburg decision will be followed by similar findings in United States District Courts throughout the country. This decision, text of which is appended, is declared by Gabriel L. Hess, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Incorporated, to be the first of its nature to be passed upon by any federal court of appellate jurisdiction:

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, FOURTH CIRCUIT

PARAMOUNT FAMOUS LASKY CORPORATION, Appellant,

vs.

NATIONAL THEATRE CORPORATION,
Appellee.

No. 3090

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia, at Lynchburg.

(Argued January 22, 1931. Decided April 13, 1931.)

Before PARKER and NORTHGOTT, Circuit Judges, and WATKINS, District Judge.

JOHN L. ABBOTT (A. D. BARSDALE and P. H. HICKSON on brief) for Appellant, and BROUN & PRICE and A. C. HOWWOOD for Appellee.

NORTHGOTT, Circuit Judge:

This is an action at law in trespass on the case in assumptit, brought in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia. The appellant, plaintiff below, and which will be here referred to as plaintiff, filed its declaration against appellee, defendant below, and which will be here referred to as defendant, alleging a breach of contract for the distribution of certain motion picture films, or photoplays, which the plaintiff furnished, and for which the defendant agreed to pay. The defendant demurred to the declaration, alleging, among other things, that the plaintiff could not maintain the action because it had failed to comply with a condition precedent to suit, in that it had not submitted the matters in controversy to arbitration as provided in the contract.

The plaintiff contended that:

(1) An injunction of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, enjoining this plaintiff from proceeding to act under the arbitration clause of the contract, constituted vis major which relieved the plaintiff from complying with such provision of the contract before instituting the action.

(2) The defendant had waived its right to require plaintiff to comply with the condition, and that the defendant, by its conduct, relieved the plaintiff from submitting the controversy to arbitration.

(3) The condition could not be complied with, because the boards to which the matter was to be submitted for arbitration had ceased to function.

The court below held with the defendant's contention, sustaining the demurrer and striking out plaintiff's bill of particulars, and it is from this action that this appeal is prosecuted.

The United States brought suit in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, attacking the contract in question on a similar one on the ground that it was in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. In an able opinion, Judge Thacher of that court, held the arbitration clause of the contract to be unlawful as being in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (United States v. Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, 34 Fed. (2) 984), and entered a decree enjoining the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, plaintiff here, from acting under the arbitration clause in the contract sued on. The opinion and decree of the District Court was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States (Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, 282 U. S. 30). In the decree, however, the court clearly shows that its action was directed at the arbitration clause alone, and was not intended to affect the rest of the contract, and among other things, the decree provided:

"Noting contained in this decree shall be construed as prohibiting any defendant . . . from performing and/or continuing to perform, or enforcing and/or continuing to enforce, by any lawful means, any contractual obligation, the performance or enforcement of which is consistent with the provisions of this decree."

The questions raised on this appeal are:

1. Is the plaintiff required by the contracts to submit the controversy here to arbitration before it can maintain the action, notwithstanding the injunction?

2. Does the injunction of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, enjoining the plaintiff from proceeding to act under the arbitration clause of the contracts, constitute vis major which relieves the plaintiff from complying with the provisions of the contract of arbitration, before instituting the action?

3. Has the defendant waived its right to rely on the failure of the plaintiff to propose arbitration before this action was brought?

4. Whether or not the contracts sued on are entire and indivisible.

The judge below sustained the demurrer on the ground that the arbitration provision was a condition precedent to the bringing of any suit on the contract, notwithstanding the injunction, which prevented arbitration, and based his opinion upon a number of authorities holding that where the condition precedent to the bringing of suit was prevented from being carried out by some unlawful act of the parties seeking to set up the injunction as a reason for not carrying out the condition, the excuse or reason could not be availed of by the parties seeking to bring the action. An examination of the authorities relied upon by the court below shows that the act of the party making it impossible to carry out the condition precedent to suit, was either a subsequent act or at least not the act itself of incorporating the unlawful condition in the contract sued upon. For instance, in 3 Williston on Contracts, Sec. 1939, quoted by the judge below, the statement of the author unquestionably refers to the failure of the party to pay a debt, the thing happening after the contract was entered into. In Patton & Shaver v. Elk River Navigation Co., 13 W. Va. 259, the injunction was granted on account of the acts and default happening after the contract was entered into. In United States v. Van Fossen, 28 Fed. Cas. 357, and a line of similar cases cited by the judge below (Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall, 366, 370, United States v. Marrin, 170 Fed. 476), it was the voluntary act of the man enlarged on bail in going into another jurisdiction where he was arrested and his own fault, that prevented him from answering on his bond. These cases are easily to be distinguished from the instant case, where a clause of the very contract itself entered into by both parties has been declared unlawful and enjoined. Certainly, it cannot be said, especially in view of the clause in the decree above quoted, exempting the rest of the contract from the taint of unlawfulness, that the whole contract is void, and that in case of breach by either party no remedy could be had.

The record also shows that, because of the injunction secured by the United States Government, the machinery for arbitration set up in the contract had ceased to exist, and the rule that an act of law, due to the act or default of one of the parties, cannot be relied upon as an excuse for his non-performance of the contract, has no application to the facts in this case.

People v. Globe Mutual Life Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 174.

Kansas Union Life Ins. Co. v. Burman, 141 Fed. 843.

Moller v. Herring, 255 Fed. 670.

See, also,

3 Williston on Contracts, p. 3295.

It would, therefore, seem, in view of the cases herein cited, that the proper rule of law is that where the obligation itself is unlawful and cannot be performed, such performance should be excused, provided the contract is divisible and the remainder of the contract is lawful. It is certainly an anomalous situation in which this plaintiff finds itself under the ruling of the court below. It is enjoined from performing a condition precedent but no relief, is accorded it, because it does not perform the condition.

Again we think that the learned judge below was in error for another reason, and that is, that the contract, as far as it related to the lawful and unlawful parts, was divisible. That this was the opinion of Judge Thacher, in the case of United States v. Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, supra, is shown by the excerpt from his decree. That such a provision, as the one in question here, is separable from the rest of the contract, is borne out by a number of decisions.

Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 129 Fed. 849.

United States Asphalt Co. v. Trinidad Lake Petroleum Co., 222 Fed. 1006.

As to the arbitration clause see:

The Fredensbro, 18 Fed. (2) 933.

Danielson v. Entre Rios Rys. Co., 22 Fed. (2) 326.

The authoritative rule as to separable or divisible contracts is laid down by Lord Mansfield, in Boone v. Eyne, 6 Term Reports 573, as follows:

"Where mutual covenants go to the whole of the consideration on both sides, they are mutual covenants; but where the covenants go only to a part and where a recompense may be had in damages, it is a different thing."

It has been expressly held that where agreements in restraint of trade were unlawful in part, they

Results of "Film Daily" Golf Tournament

Representatives of the film industry in the East joined in making the 19th Film Daily golf tournament one of the most successful of the series. The dinner funfest was voted the most enjoyable in seven years of the event. More than 100 braved a steady rain that drenched the golfers through the morning play of the tourney, which was held at the Fenimore Club at White Plains, N. Y.

Other tournaments may have had a larger attendance, but the fact that the number of players reached a total of 120 before the day was over, with many more at the dinner, was a credit to those who participated and to those who were in charge of the affair, headed by Jack Alicoate and Bruce Gallup, who has been overseer of the handicap and awards throughout the nine years of the tournaments. Those on the committee were Al Lichtman, Jack Alicoate, Bruce Gallup, ("Red") Kann and Don Mersereau.

McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102.

In view of our conclusion on these points, it is not necessary to discuss the question raised as to whether the defendant had waived its right to rely on the failure of the plaintiff to propose arbitration. The action of the court below in sustaining the demurrer was erroneous, and the judgment is accordingly Reversed.

Following is a digest of the case of Columbia Pictures Corporation v. Bi-Metallic Investment Company.

This action was decided in the U. S. District Court, District of Colorado on August 8, 1930. The defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take a certain number of motion pictures for his theatre but failed and refused to accept, exhibit or pay for a part of the pictures contracted for, whereupon the plaintiff sued for damages.

The defendant set up as its defense that the Standard Exhibition Contract is illegal, being in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act and that the use thereof by the distributors of motion pictures was in furtherance of a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

In its argument the defendant relied upon the decision in the case of United States v. Paramount Famous Lasky Corp., et. al., 34 Fed. 2d 984, in which Judge Thacher held that the Eighteenth Clause of the Standard Exhibition Contract providing for compulsory arbitration was evidence of a conspiracy among the distributors. In the Colorado case, the court held that the case of United States vs. Paramount, et. al., did not apply. The action was brought to recover an agreed amount which the defendant owed to the plaintiff as license fees for pictures which the defendant refused to take and pay for in violation of its contract for the delivery of certain pictures. The court held that such an agreement is not illegal. Eliminating the Eighteenth Clause of the Standard Exhibition Contract, the Contract is one which the parties might lawfully enter into, and even granting that the arbitration clause is illegal, the court held that in the present action, being one for the recovery of an amount due by the defendant to the plaintiff, it was not necessary to a decision of the case to take the arbitration clause into consideration.

In the case of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation as plaintiff v. Bi-Metallic Investment Company, the court held that "by its refusal to arbitrate in any manner, the defendant cannot deprive the plaintiff of its right to sue upon the contract.
